Multidisciplinary Pain Center Organization And Personnel Functions For Pain Management:

The Multidisciplinary Pain Center Jawahar N. Ghia, 2012-12-06 The pain center clinic is in the stage of transition It has come a long way since chronic pain was a nonexistent entity and patients with difficult pain problems did not receive well deserved attention or were lost in the busy practices of various specialty clinics Thirty five years ahead of the rest of us John Bonica was the first physician who had a clear vision of a pain center's potential Twenty years later in response to loud public demands for relief of chronic pain this idea was put into practice by a number of others on a somewhat larger scale A team of specialists from various disciplines trained in the management of chronic pain now offer approaches ranging from simple outpatient care to inpatient hospitalization for comprehensive care including drug detoxification behavior modification and total rehabilitation of these patients Hospitals have entered this arena with renewed enthusiasm The pain center clinic is now an established accepted and expanding method of providing care for chronic pain patients The chapters in this book are based on examples of multidisciplinary projects that deal comprehensively with management of chronic pain Aimed primarily at the pain center clinic in the university hospital setting this book ranges from historical perspectives to current pain centers with their less orthodox methods of relieving chronic pain to the future of algology as a specialty Neural

Blockade in Clinical Anesthesia and Management of Pain Michael J. Cousins, Phillip O. Bridenbaugh, 1998 This unique text details the use of regional anesthesia for the management of all aspects of pain It demonstrates the various blocks used with lavish and classic illustrations to illuminate the text describing each procedure It also covers the latest aspects of pain management with recent advances and breakthroughs reported and discussed as to their relative usefulness and efficacy in clinical practice Classic contributions are balanced with reports of new technologic and research developments providing the best overview of regional anesthesia and pain management available today Contemporary Issues in Chronic Pain

Management Winston C.V. Parris, 2012-12-06 PROFESSOR SIR KENNETH L STUART Pain control has become one of medicine's most rapidly growing disciplines and I welcome the opportunity to write this foreword to a book that I am sure will make its own unique contribution to advancing this discipline My pleasure in writing it is heightened by my pride in the fact that its editor was at one time an undergraduate student of mine at the University of the West Indies in Jamaica One of the uncertainties teachers always face is that they can never predict how their charges will turn out This uncertainty has been happily resolved Dr Parris professional career has been marked by the same dedication and commitment that characterized his undergraduate days and that clearly has been brought to the preparation of this scholarly and practical work Pain relief has been until recently a comparatively neglected field Its neglect was determined not so much by lack of professional awareness of its importance but mainly because so little could be done about it in the past Pain

Management of AIDS Patients Thomas Janisse, 2012-12-06 Thousands of articles and many books have been published on the acquired immunodeficiency syndrome AIDS There are however no studies or case reports and only several articles published on the anesthetic considerations for a person with AIDS or in pain with AIDS There is no literature on the pain management of AIDS patients Writing on this subject must be considered trailblazing The reason anesthesiologists should know about AIDS has rapidly extended from concern over transmission of infection to anesthetic and analgesic considerations The anesthesiologist may also be part of a pain management team on either an acute or a chronic pain service The requirement may be to treat an HIV positive or AIDS patient acutely postoperatively or in consult to a psychiatric medical or surgical service In a pain clinic setting the anesthesiologist may be concerned with diagnosis treatment or referral for other multidisciplinary consultation The earlier question of central nervous system involvement in AIDS is now moot rapidly replaced with the knowledge that the eNS if not primarily infected is so shortly thereafter Protected by the blood brain barrier the eNS becomes both a sanctuary and reservoir for HIV Because neurologic complications of HIV are common and since knowledge of the nervous system is essential for anesthetic and pain management it is important to review HIV infection of the nervous system

Persistent Pain N. Timothy Lynch, Sridhar V. Vasudevan, 2012-12-06 Chronic and persistent pain which is a problem for the individual who suffers and the society that has to deal with it has become increasingly appreciated Over the last three decades several books and journals have been specifically devoted to the topic of pain especially chronic and persistent pain It has been increasingly recognized that chronic and persistent pain unlike acute pain involves significant psychosocial factors and requires treatment strategies that deal with these issues All measurements and factors that affect improvement seem to be in the psychosocial area rather than the medical biological physical areas Psychosocial conveys the importance of the environmental and interpersonal factors of the patient s functioning The writing of this book has brought together some of the leading researchers and clinicians in the area of managing the patient with chronic pain The authors express their opinions based on experience and review of the literature available to date Each of the chapters focuses on an important element of the assessment and or treatment intervention utilized for the individual with chronic pain The concluding chapter summarizes the status of the assessment and treatment strategies for those patients

Abram,2012-12-06 The diagnosis of cancer inspires fear in part because of the high mortality rate associated with most malignancies and in part because of the perception that cancer is a painful disease Recently compiled statistics tend to support patients fears Pain is a major symptom in 70% of patients with advanced cancer 1 Half of all patients undergoing anticancer therapy experience pain 2 It has been estimated by members of the World Health Organization that 3 5 million people worldwide suffer from cancer pain One study of the severity of cancer pain estimates that pain is moderate to severe in 50% of cancer pain patients very severe or excruciating in 30% 3 An analysis of several reports of patients in developed countries estimates that 50 80% of patients had inadequate relief 2 In underdeveloped countries adequacy of treatment may be far lower because of lack of availability of medical facilities and legal constraints on the use of potent narcotics The picture need not be this bleak The reality is that for most patients cancer pain is relatively easy to control with simple inexpensive measures Several studies have indicated that cancer pain can be well controlled with oral morphine in over 90% of patients 4 5 Long acting orally effective opiate preparations such as time release morphine methadone and levorphanol allow patients to sleep comfortably through the night When the oral route is impossible narcotics can be administered rectally or by intravenous or subcutaneous infusion
