Multinational Enterprises and Technological Spillovers Tommaso Perez, 2003-09-02 An analysis of the impact of inward investment on the competitiveness of indigenous firms Multinational Enterprises and Technological Spillovers draws on evidence from the UK and Italian manufacturing sectors to show how foreign presence may generate both virtuous and vicious circles of development according to a number of interrelated factors These include the level of the foreign presence its rate of increase the technological disparities between foreign and indigenous firms and the political response An examination of the productive and innovatory activities of US and Japanese firms in Europe is also provided to enlighten the differential role of European countries in the global operations of overseas multinationals Multinational Enterprises and Technological Spillovers: an Evolutionary Model Tommaso Perez, 1995 Multinational Corporations and Technological Spillovers in Mexican Manufacturing Lawrence Robert Kaufmann, 1993

Multinational Enterprises, International Trade, and Productivity Growth Wolfgang Keller, Stephen R. Yeaple, 2003-12-01 We estimate international technology spillovers to U S manufacturing firms via imports and foreign direct investment FDI between 1987 and 1996 In contrast to earlier work our results suggest that FDI leads to substantial productivity gains for domestic firms The size of FDI spillovers is economically important accounting for about 11 percent of productivity growth in U S firms between 1987 and 1996 In addition there is some evidence for import related spillovers but it is weaker than for FDI spillovers The paper also gives a detailed account of why our study leads to results different from those found in previous work This analysis indicates that our results are also likely to apply to other countries and periods not sufficient condition to have an efficient absorptive capacity level and or skilled human capital stock in order to benefit from these flows This study has policy implications for the automotive industry as well as practical recommendations for the public institutions and top executives in emerging country companies and multinationals in order to conceive and implement science and technology policies in supporting the knowledge transfers Multinational Enterprises, Innovative Strategies and Systems of Innovation John Cantwell, José Molero, 2003-01-01 This volume explores the extent to which multinational enterprises MNEs are decentralizing the creation of new technological capabilities to various countries The book contends that technological strategies and innovation activities undertaken by firms are a critical part of the increasing internationalization of economic activity and that MNEs are the main actors for these changes It goes on to explain that MNEs must now effectively manage new technological assets in order to cope with the extensive changes in the nature of international competition The Oxford Handbook of International Business Alan M. existing books typically focus on the investment activity of a single country or region such as China or East Asia but a comprehensive analysis is still missing in this regard The novelty of this edited volume is that it aims at exploring EMNEs location determinants strategies activities and challenges in East Central Europe by discussing its anomalies to the traditional theories as well as to other types of MNEs in the ECE region The authors focus on EMNEs not only from China but from other important emerging countries too such as Russia India South Korea Taiwan Turkey Brazil or South Africa

The Effect of Multinational Enterprises on

Climate Change Victor Steenberg, Abhishek Saurav, 2023-08-07 Multinational enterprises MNEs provide both a fundamental risk to and an opportunity for climate change mitigation. The climate ambitions of MNEs will affect the environmental performance of countries around the world. As a leading actor, proactive MNEs can impose sustainability standards or encourage green technology transfers that in some cases could affect millions of producers and accelerate the climate transition. However, obstructive MNEs may equally hold back any progress to reduce a country's emissions via inaction or by actively resisting, obstructing or lobbying against change. The objective of this report is to study the effect of MNEs on climate change. Toward this goal, the report reviews the latest available data, conducts new empirical analysis and summarizes pioneering literature. The report answers four key questions related to the relationship between MNEs and climate change: 1. What effect do MNEs currently have on climate change, both through their own activities and through the emissions of their broader supply chains? 2. How do MNEs shape the potential transfer of green technologies to domestic firms, and how do different types of interactions with MNEs stimulate such technology transfers? 3. How committed are leading MNEs currently to transitioning their supply chains to net zero emissions by 2050, and do they have long, medium and short range strategies to realize this? 4. What types of policies can influence MNEs' effects on climate change?
