becoming saturated multinational enterprises MNEs have turned towards emerging markets in order to capitalise on new opportunities for economic growth London and Hart 2004 Especially through the recent global crisis the key role of developing and emerging countries as they have sought to sustain global economic growth has become the focal point of worldwide interest Rao 2010 According to McKinsey 2010 an ongoing shift in global economic activity from developed to developing economies accompanied by growth in the number of consumers in emerging markets are the global developments that executives around the world view as the most important for business and the most positive for their own companies profits over the next five years The results of recent surveys such as those by the International Monetary Fund predict that developing and emerging markets will grow by 6.3% in 2011 In turn this has evoked a significant sense of urgency among several MNE executives Rao 2010 Furthermore a survey by McKinsey 2011 found that in the coming decade more than 45% of global GDP growth will be contributed by China India Russia Indonesia Turkey and Mexico Likewise in about 15 years time about 57% of the one billion households with an income 20 000 per annum will be in developing countries As Cavusgil et al 2002 p 166 pointed out once thought of as backward and low tech these regions are now rapidly transforming their economies By adopting new production techniques and technologies markets such as China India and South Korea have become vital places for production Many companies from traditional developed nations have capitalised on this trend shifting their production and research and development R Pacek and Thorniley 2007 How do multinational companies from emerging markets gain competitive advantages in global markets? Jonas Dubiel, 2020-09-22 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2017 in the subject Business economics Business Management Corporate Governance grade 1.3 Friedrich Alexander University Erlangen Nuremberg Department of International Management language English abstract The purpose of the thesis is to present selected business strategies and link them with the ability of Emerging Market Multinational Enterprises EMNEs to build and strengthen competitive advantages Further to that uses the thesis empirical case studies of Tata Motors from India and Lenovo from China to analyse their performance and competitive advantages The results of the thesis reveal that EMNEs employ competitive advantages which underpin their expansion abroad These advantages are mainly built by finding innovative opportunities to leverage country specific advantages In addition competitive advantages are obtained by accessing new knowledge in advanced markets through cross border acquisitions The case studies reveal that EMNEs acquire abroad to access knowledge such as brand reputation and technologies As a result the international value chain structure needs to be configured A meaningful phenomenon of global competitiveness is the increasing amount of Emerging Market Multinational Enterprises EMNEs that have succeeded in the constraining institutional home markets and are now participating globally due to foreign direct investments However despite the increase in academic research explaining the internationalization of EMNEs little research has been carried out to analyse the success of EMNEs Emerging-market Multinational Enterprises in East Central Europe Ágnes Szunomár, 2020-11-23 The rise of multinational enterprises MNEs

from emerging markets is topical important and poses a number of questions and challenges that require considerable attention in the future from academia as well as business management The recent takeovers of high profile companies in developed or developing countries by non European emerging market MNEs EMNEs such as Lenovo Wanhua China Hindalco India CVRD Brazil Cemex Mexico Lukoil Russia etc as well as the greenfield or brownfield investments of emerging companies such as Huawei ZTE Tata Pepco etc show a new trend where new kind of firms become major players globally EMNEs have become important players in several regions around the globe ranging from the least developed countries of Africa through the developing markets in Latin America and Asia to the developed countries of the United States or the European Union including East Central European ECE countries EMNEs presence on the global level has resulted in numerous studies in the international literature but those research results barely cover EMNEs activities in the ECE region in the East Central European EU member countries including the Czech Republic Hungary Poland Slovakia and Slovenia The existing books typically focus on the investment activity of a single country or region such as China or East Asia but a comprehensive analysis is still missing in this regard The novelty of this edited volume is that it aims at exploring EMNEs location determinants strategies activities and challenges in East Central Europe by discussing its anomalies to the traditional theories as well as to other types of MNEs in the ECE region The authors focus on EMNEs not only from China but from other important emerging countries too such as Russia India South Korea Taiwan Turkey Brazil or South Africa The Oxford Handbook of Management in Emerging Markets Robert E.
