Late Victorian Crime Fiction in the Shadows of Sherlock C. Clarke, 2014-09-26 This book investigates the development of crime fiction in the 1880s and 1890s challenging studies of late Victorian crime fiction which have given undue prominence to a handful of key figures and have offered an over simplified analytical framework thereby overlooking the generic moral and formal complexities of the nascent genre The Illustrated London News, 1843 Subject Catalog, 1979 Library of Congress, 1979 Mama Learned Us to Work Lu Ann Jones, 2003-10-16 Farm women of the twentieth century South have been portrayed as oppressed worn out and isolated Lu Ann Jones tells quite a different story in Mama Learned Us to Work Building upon evocative oral histories she encourages us to understand these women as consumers producers and agents of economic and cultural change As consumers farm women bargained with peddlers at their backdoors A key business for many farm women was the butter and egg trade small scale dairying and raising chickens Their earnings provided a crucial margin of economic safety for many families during the 1920s and 1930s and offered women some independence from their men folks These innovative women showed that poultry production paid off and laid the foundation for the agribusiness poultry industry that emerged after World War II Jones also examines the relationships between farm women and home demonstration agents and the effect of government sponsored rural reform She discusses the professional culture that developed among white agents as they reconciled new and old ideas about women's roles and shows that black agents despite prejudice linked their clients to valuable government resources and gave new meanings to traditions of self help mutual aid and racial uplift
