

Charles Dickens and George Bernard Shaw Comparison

By Victoria Thörner, Silver

Charles John Huffman Dickens was born on 7 February (1812) in Portsmouth, Hampshire, England. He was the son of Elizabeth née Barrow and John Dickens and the second of seven children. Charles father had financial difficulties throughout his life and in 1824 he was imprisoned for debt. David Copperfield was his most autobiographical of novels; the story itself was richly influenced by his own childhood : At the age fifteen Charles was employed as an office boy at an attorney's office and studied short hand at night. In 1829, Dickens became a reporter at Doctor's Commons Courts In 1832 he began working as a newspaper reporter. Dickens traveled to Canada and America where he spoke on antislavery and piracy. In 1853 Dickens began to give public readings. Dickens later ventured to Ireland and Scotland and presented his public readings. Dickens was becoming very ill, but 1868 traveled to America to do another reading. Dickens was exhausted both physically and mentally, but continued to proceed compulsively. In 1870 On June 8, Dickens suffered a much more severe stroke and died the next day on June 9, 1870. He was buried at Westminster Abbey 2

Dickens wrote a lot about the misfortunes in the society and used his life experiences to influence his novels such as the story of Oliver Twist: Oliver Twist is the story of a orphan who wants to stay good but the harsh mistreats he gains and the non-help that he requires from the society leaves him utterly desperate and is forced to flee society's rules and laws and become the town's slum by joining Fagin's' gang who are pickpockets and thieves. Oliver Twist had a very rich background; in the year of 1834 The Poor Law Amendment Act was introduced which meant that the workhouses were more of a deterrent to idleness as it was believed that people were poor because they were idle and needed to be punished. Dickens had lived that very tale; at the age of twelve he was sent to work at Warren's boot polish Blacking factory to help supporting his family. The experience had a major impact on him, he became utterly psychologically upset and left the experience left him scarred for life 3 Dickens reaction is stated in the preface to the Library Edition of Oliver Twist in 1858:

*"I saw no reason, when I wrote this book, why the very dregs of life, so long as their speech did not offend the ear, should not serve the purpose of a moral, at least as well as its froth and cream"*4

Oliver Twist was heavily influenced by the Industrial Period in the Victorian England when society was colored by the economy crisis and inflation. The
