The British Industrial Revolution in Global Perspective Robert C. Allen,2009-04-09 Why did the industrial revolution take place in eighteenth century Britain and not elsewhere in Europe or Asia In this convincing new account Robert Allen argues that the British industrial revolution was a successful response to the global economy of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries He shows that in Britain wages were high and capital and energy cheap in comparison to other countries in Europe and Asia As a result the breakthrough technologies of the industrial revolution the steam engine the cotton mill and the substitution of coal for wood in metal production were uniquely profitable to invent and use in Britain The high wage economy of pre industrial Britain also fostered industrial development since more people could afford schooling and apprenticeships It was only when British engineers made these new technologies more cost effective during the nineteenth century that the industrial revolution would spread around the world Isis George Sarton,1924 Brief table of contents of vols I XX in v 21 p 502 618 Routledge Revivals: John Phillips and the Business of Victorian Science (2005) Jack
