Prison Bureaucracies in the United States, Mexico, India, and Honduras

Brian Norris, 2018-02-19 Modern criminal justice institutions globally include police criminal courts and prisons Prisons unlike courts which developed out of an old aristocratic function and unlike police which developed out of an ancient posse or standing army function are only about 200 years old and are humanitarian inventions Prisons defined as modern institutions that deprive the freedom of individuals who violate societies most basic norms in lieu of corporal or capital punishment were near universal at the dawn of the 21st century and their use was expanding globally The US alone spent 60 billion on prisons in 2014 Prison Bureaucracies addresses two fundamental questions Do prisons in Christian Hindu and Muslim societies separated by space and level of socioeconomic development follow a common evolutionary path Given that differences in prison structure and performance exist what factors resources laws leadership historical accident institutions culture account for differences Based on more than 150 interviews conducted in ten international trips with prison administrators in 15 male state prisons in the US Mexico India and Honduras Norris provides ethnographic descriptions of prisons bureaucracies that are immediately recognizable as similar institutions but that nonetheless possessed distinctive forms and developmental trajectories Economists and political scientists have argued that incentives provided by institutions matter for good or bad public administration and this is undeniable in the prisons of this study But institutional incentives were one factor among many affecting the form and function of the prisons and prison systems of this study Latin America: The countries of Latin America, 1968 The University System and Economic Development in Mexico Since 1929 David Lorey, 1993-11-01 For decades Mexican leaders and scholars as well as outside observers have spoken of a Mexican university system in crisis expressing concern over student political activism and violence declining quality of instruction and facilities crowded campuses and lack of employment for graduates When the government harshly suppressed a student movement in 1968 world attention focused on the turmoil that was endemic in university life During the severe economic slump of the 1980s the fundamental weaknesses of the Mexican economy its inefficiency and inability to compete in the world were often attributed to failings of the university system Using original quantitative data on the graduates of all Mexican universities in a dozen major professional fields since 1929 the author explores the nature of this purported crisis by examining a series of questions about the Mexican university system How have the changing policy priorities of the Mexican government affected the university's education of professionals How have the Mexican economy's needs for professionals shaped the functioning of the university system Has Mexico trained enough professionals Have they been trained in the right fields Has the university been able to respond to demands for upward mobility through higher education The author's detailed analysis reveals a paradox to the extent that Mexican universities may not be producing the kinds of expertise needed for competing in the new global marketplace that educational quality has declined gradually over time and that the university has not contributed much to social mobility one may indeed speak of a crisis Yet because the university system has reached its present form in response to demands placed on it by government, the economy and society responding pragmatically to circumstances beyond its control. The author concludes that the crisis is not fundamentally a university crisis but rather one that lies in Mexican economy and society at large.
