Multiple Sclerosis A Critical Conspectus:

Multiple Sclerosis E.J. Field, 2012-12-06 Although a strikingly modern account of multiple disseminated sclerosis was given by Charcot more than one hundred years ago we are still not sure of the precise nature of the disease still less of any precise mode of management Even diagnosis is at best probable This collection of essays examines the particular difficulties which beset the problem and have militated against the solution problems of data collection and evaluation clinical and biochemical vagaries and unanswered questions laboratory test prediction of the disease etc Experts in their fields have set out the difficulties and way forward as they see them and there must necessarily be overlap or contradictions which underline our lack of knowledge Clearly no attempt can be made to cover more than a very few aspects of the problem a further volume is planned to review other areas not covered here in particular the relationship between multiple sclerosis and experimental allergic encephalo myelitis but it is hoped that the softness of much of the data we have to work upon will become apparent It is intended that this volume should clearly differ from the large number of monographs and reports of symposia dedicated to multiple sclerosis in bringing out the shortcomings of our approaches and in some respects our naiveties rather than our individual brilliancies contributions of laboratory science to the understanding of multiple sclerosis its etiology pathogenesis diagnosis and treatment Where so much is unknown disagreement was expected and indeed welcome and it is regrettable that it was not possible to publish verbatim the often animated and always interesting discussion Differing views on the relevance of experimental allergic encephalomyelitis to multiple sclerosis were expressed by Dr Wisniewski Professor Seitelberger and Professor Alvord who graphically illustrated his changing beliefs over the years Professor Seitelberger laid much greater emphasis on remyelination in remission in multiple sclerosis than had previously been the accepted view The disorder of both humoral and cellular immunity in multiple sclerosis was discussed by Dr Roos and Professor Link Dr Gilden described how recombinative techniques might be applied to the detection of a virus in multiple sclerosis The continued inability to detect any antigen to match the oligoclonal IgG bands in the CSF in multiple sclerosis patients was disappointing and there was an increasing tendency to regard the bands as nonsense antibodies

Marine Biogenic Lipids, Fats and Oils Robert George Ackman, 1989-04-30 This monograph will put the biogenic marine lipids of many organisms in perspective Up to 100 years ago fish and shellfish were frequent and major components of our western diet In search of progress and convenience we have given up many such foods in favor of those produced by agribusiness interests There are different viewpoints on the merits of the marine omega 3 fatty acids and of the terrestrial omega 6 fatty acids in human nutrition and every individual may have different needs This monograph should help researchers relate these basic building blocks of lipids in the fascinating world of marine organisms to our contemporary interest in human biochemistry nutrition and health

Neurochemistry B. W. Agranoff, M. H. Aprison, 2012-12-06 The original premise of the Editors in initiating this series was that there existed a readership of neurochemists with considerable biochemical background who would make use of a series dedicated to both new developments and specialized reviews in neurochemistry. Having selected our authors we have offered them virtually complete freedom to reflect and speculate in a field in which they have achieved prominence. The response to the first two volumes has been rewarding. The present one continues in this tradition. While we have not attempted to publish specialized volumes the present volume contains two somewhat related chapters. Chapters 4 and 5 on the role of amino acid neurotransmitters. The first three chapters examine three diverse approaches each of current interest in neurochemical approaches to the molecular bases of neuronal and glial structure. B. W. Agranoff, M. H. Cerebrospinal Fluid in Neurology and Psychiatry Joseph R. Bianchine, H. McConnell, 2013-11-11 Scientists have speculated as to the nature of cerebrospinal fluid (CSF) the third circulation or vital spirit for centuries. Just what is this mysterious bathing solution of the central nervous system? Is it a vehicle of transport for an animal spirit directing all our activities as thought by Galen Singer 1956 or but a modified tap water Halliburton 1917? With the advent of lumbar puncture cerebrospinal fluid has become a readily available and important means of studying disease affecting the nervous system. In recent years many sophisticated tools including computer guided gas chromatography mass spectrometry and high performance liquid chromatography have made it possible to identify and quantify many constituents of this fluid. The CSF has an enormous though largely untapped potential in aiding diagnosis and evaluating treatment of many neurological, psychiatric and systemic disorders. As the ependyma is only a diffusional barrier between the CSF and extracellular fluid of the brain for many compounds changes in the concentration of these compounds in the CSF may reflect disease processes in the brain. Multiple Sclerosis J.
