Research Paper SE. ,1986      Fossil Energy Update ,1982      Advances in Soil Science ,2012-12-06 Soil degradation is clearly one of the most pressing problems facing man kind A continuation of soil degradation will eventually lead to a loss in crop productivity even though fertilizers and other inputs often result in increased yields in the short term. Soil degradation also leads to environmental pollution. A decrease in soil quality invariably leads to a decrease in water quality and often in air quality. While there is a clear consensus that soil degradation is a major problem, the literature on this subject leaves numerous baffling questions. If statistics on land degradation are correct, there is a definite cause for concern and present a mammoth challenge for agricultural scientists. There are those that say the scientific community has over-dramatized this issue and created a credibility problem. Consequently, Volume 11 of Advances in Soil Science was organized by Dr. Rattan Lal, who is recognized as a leading authority on the subject. The objective of Volume 11 was to assess the types and processes of soil degradation and establish some of the major cause-effect relationships. Volume II documented the seriousness of soil degradation in many parts of the world. Therefore, it seemed immediately important to devote a volume to the principles and technologies for restoring degraded soils to a productive status. While the land resources of the limited world population are rapidly increasing, particularly in developing countries, Dr.
