3.3 Performance measurement system for PPA

3.3.1 Overall PPA delivery performance

Performance indicators and key metrics

Performance indicators

There are no specific indicators that measure the outcome from which PPA achieves its purpose. The goal of the indicators is to track the progress of the delivery and measure relevant efficiency. There are no measures of the outcomes. However the management's assumption is the best metric to measure results because they directly relate what has been achieved against setting the outcome of providing the relevant service.

There always seems to be indicators although they are not. These are the following identified under the seven categories: communication through email and other digital media; maintaining transparency and accountability; tracking the progress of the implementation; and the outcome of the PPA. The four categories mentioned above can be mapped according to the six primary metrics. A primary metric is something that is measured and evaluated over time while other metrics are used to evaluate the primary metric. The four primary metrics are: "Whether there are any new contract opportunities created and their development"; "New contract opportunities created"; "Whether there are any new contract opportunities created and their development"; and "Whether there are any new contract opportunities created". Primary metrics have a lead indicator like "Communication and transparency maintained"; "Communication and transparency maintained"; "Communication and transparency maintained"; and "Communication and transparency maintained". Primary metrics have a lag indicator like "Contract opportunities created"; "Contract opportunities created"; "Contract opportunities created"; and "Contract opportunities created".
