The Island: An Adventure of A Person of Quality Richard Whiteing, It was such a sight civilisation in a nutshell that was what made me pause I was a part of it and Apollo was taking a peep at his own legs Why not we all seemed to be going on so beautifully we were all busy all doing something for progress What a scene The Exchange I had just left with its groups of millionaires gossiping Bagdad and the Irawaddy Chicago and the Cape dividend day over at the Bank yonder and the well known sight of the Blessed going to take their quarterly reward a sheriff's coach turning the angle of the Mansion House breakfast to an African pro consul I believe a vanishing splendour of satin and plush and gold dandy clerks making for Birch's with the sure and certain hope of a partnership in their easy grace shabby clerks making for the bun shops spry brokers going to take the odds against Egyptians and with an appropriate horsiness of air a parson two hundred and fortieth annual thanksgiving sermon at St Hilda's to commemorate Testator's encounter with Barbary pirates and providential escape itinerant salesmen of studs pocket combs and universal watch keys flower girls at the foot of the statue a patch of colour beggar at the foot of the steps another patch the red shirt beautifully toned down in wear Perfect We want more of this in London giant policeman moving him on irruption of noisy crowd from the Cornhill corner East End marching West to demonstrate for the right to a day's toil for a day's crust thieves and bludgeon men and stone men in attendance on demonstration detectives in attendance on thieves shutters up at the jewellers as they pass probable average of 7s 6d to the hundred pockets with a wall only to divide them from all the turtle of the Mansion House or all the bullion of the Bank And for background the nondescript thousands in black and brown and russet and every neutral hue with the sun over all and between the sun and the thousands the London mist It was something as a picture but so much more as a thought What a wonder of parts and whole What a bit of machinery The beggars and occasionally the stock jobbers and the nondescripts to go wrong the policeman to take them up the parson to show the way of repentance and the sheriff to hang them if need be when all was done With this the dandies to adorn the scene myself not altogether unornamental the merchants the clerks and the dividend takers all but cog and fly and crank of the same general scheme What a bit of machinery But suddenly the sunlight faded and there was a change in me It was not a change of cause and effect but only a coincidence I fancied I saw the man in red furtively writhing in his shirt with the beggar s itch scratching himself so to speak against his own clothes At any rate something threw the apparatus out of gear They seemed all scratching themselves on the sly The whole thing looked as well as ever but how did it work I saw the clerks home the shabbies to Stockton lodgings of unstained brick where infants down with the measles called for drink in the night and querulous wives compounded that claim for romance with which every woman born of woman comes into the world for the not too solid certainty of bread and butter at thirty shillings a week all told I saw the brokers making for their haven of Bayswater stucco to receive the reports of Jane s progress in Elementary Physics Master Harry s broken window the afternoon call of the Bristow family to bring news that of late Mr Bristow has not been feeling quite so well receiving these things I say and wanting to stamp and shout or do something to give a pulse to life I saw the sheriff s coach methought with Care in it There had been another troublesome meeting in Hyde Park London was going to be governed for Londoners and to night s snug Company Dinner with its guzzling treasurers masters wardens upper wardens renter wardens past masters chaplains and the whole batch might be one of the last of the disgusting series The very policeman had his anxieties would civic reform bring him down to the wage level of the Metropolitan force A soldier who had strayed into the prospect seemed to think it was odd to have to guard the Bank on sevenpence a day They were all scratching themselves and when an entire civilisation begins to do that it is a serious thing The Island, Or, An Adventure of a Person of Quality Richard Whiteing,1888 The Island Richard Whiteing,1888 Current Biography Yearbook ,1999
