Markets Class And Social Change Trading Networks And Poverty In Rural South Asia:

Markets, Class and Social Change B. Crow, 2001-10-10 At the beginning of the twenty first century an idealized view of markets informs government policy Real differences in how markets interact with social change are obscured and public action on poverty is constrained Markets Class and Social Change uses a detailed study of the grain trade in Bangladesh to show how socially constrained patterns of market involvement may systematically benefit the rich while disadvantaging the poor More generally the book suggests that markets are implicated in the making of society its divisions identities and directions

Marx in the Field Alessandra Mezzadri, 2021-02-15 Marx in the Field is a unique edited collection illustrating the relevance of the Marxian method to study contemporary capitalism and the global development process Essays in the collection bring Marx to the field in three ways They illustrate how Marxian categories can be concretely deployed for field research in the global economy they analyse how these categories may be adapted during fieldwork and they discuss data collection methods supporting Marxian analysis Crucially many of the contributions expand the scope of Marxian analysis by combining its insights with those of other intellectual traditions including radical feminisms critical realism and postcolonial studies The book defines the possibilities and challenges of fieldwork guided by Marxian analysis including those emerging from the COVID 19 pandemic The collection takes a global approach to the study of development and of contemporary capitalism While some essays focus on themes and geographical areas of long term concern for international development like informal or rural poverty and work across South Asia Southern and West Africa or South America others focus instead on actors benefitting from the development process like regional exporters larger farmers and traders or on unequal socio economic outcomes across richer and emerging economies and regions including Gulf countries North America Southern Europe or Post Soviet Central and Eastern Europe Some essays explore global processes cutting across the world economy connecting multiple regions actors and inequalities While some of the contributions focus on classic Marxian tropes in the study of contemporary capitalism like class labour and working conditions agrarian change or global commodity chains and prices others aim at demonstrating the relevance of the Marxian method beyond its traditional boundaries for instance for exploring the interplays between food nutrition and poverty the links between social reproduction gender and homework the features of migration and refugees regimes tribal chieftaincy structures or prison labour or the dynamics structuring global surrogacy Overall through the analysis of an extremely varied set of concrete settings and cases this book illustrates the extraordinary insights we can gain by bringing Marx in the field

Transforming the Rural Nonfarm Economy
 Steven Haggblade, Peter B. R. Hazell, Thomas Reardon, 2007-11-16 Contrary to conventional wisdom that equates rural economies with agriculture rural residents in developing countries often rely heavily on activities other than farming for their income Indeed nonfarm work accounts for between one third and one half of rural incomes in the developing world In recent years accelerating globalization increasing competition from large businesses expanding urban markets for rural goods and services and greater availability of information and communication technology have combined to expose rural nonfarm businesses to new opportunities as well as new risks By examining these rapid changes in the rural nonfarm economy international experts explore how the rural nonfarm economy can contribute to overall economic growth in developing countries and how the poor can participate in this rapidly evolving segment of the economy The authors review an array of recent studies of the rural nonfarm economy in order to summarize existing empirical evidence explore policy implications and identify future research priorities They examine the varied scale structure and composition of the rural nonfarm economy as well as its relationship with agricultural and urban enterprises And they address key questions about the role of public intervention in the rural nonfarm economy and how the rural poor can participate in and navigate the rapid transition underway in rural areas The contributors offer new insights to specialists in rural development and to others interested in overall economic development
