Redacted Jonathan Abel, 2012-09-13 At the height of state censorship in Japan more indexes of banned books circulated more essays on censorship were published more works of illicit erotic and proletarian fiction were produced and more passages were Xed out than at any other moment before or since As censors construct and maintain their own archives their acts of suppression yield another archive filled with documents on against and in favor of censorship The extant archive of the Japanese imperial censor 1923-1945 and the archive of the Occupation censor 1945-1952 stand as tangible reminders of this contradictory function of censors As censors removed specific genres topics and words from circulation some Japanese writers converted their offensive rants to innocuous fluff after successive encounters with the authorities But another coterie of editors bibliographers and writers responded to censorship by pushing back using their encounters with suppression as incitement to rail against the authorities and to appeal to the prurient interests of their readers This study examines these contradictory relationships between preservation production and redaction to shed light on the dark valley attributed to wartime culture and to cast a shadow on the supposedly bright open space of free postwar discourse Winner of the 2010-2011 First Book Award of the Weatherhead East Asian Institute Columbia University
