Neoplasia And Cell Differentiation:

Neoplasia and Cell Differentiation G. V. Sherbet, 1973-12-19 Differentiation and Neoplasia R. G. McKinnell, M. A. Diberardino, M. Blumenfeld, R. D. Bergad, 2013-03-09 There is no commonly accepted mechanism to explain differentiation of either normal or neoplastic cells Despite this fact the organizers of the 3rd International Conference on Differentiation recognized that there is much emerging evidence which supports the view that both normal cells and many cancer cells share common differentiative processes Accordingly the organizers perceived that clinical scientists and developmental biologists would greatly benefit by together considering differentiation In that way developmental biologists would be apprised of recent insights in cancer cell biology and the physician scientist would be updated on events in developmental biology and both would gain new understanding of the cell biology of neoplasia A specific example may reveal the potential value of developmental biologists interacting with cancer physicians An example chosen at random suggests that probably any paper included in the symposium volume would serve the purpose Dr Stephen Subtelny reviewed recent studies by his laboratory concerning germ cell migration and replication in frog embryos How might those results interest the cancer scientist Dr Subtelny showed that primordial germ cells of a fertile graft will reverse their migratory direction and move into a sterile host Perhaps in this context it would not be inappropriate to state that the germ cells of the graft metastasized into the host Germ cells from grafts of a different species will populate the previously sterile host gonad Cell Differentiation and Neoplasia Grady F. Saunders, 1978 Cell Differentiation and Neoplasia Grady F. Saunders, 1978 Tumor Biology Asterios S. Tsiftoglou, Alan C. Sartorelli, David E. Housman, T. Michael Dexter, 2013-06-29 With the aim of providing an international forum for the communication of both the basic and clinical aspects of molecular and cellular biology of cancer a NATO ASI was held in Porto Carras Halkidiki Greece September 1-12 1995 The principles as well as recent developments in tumor biology were discussed in depth with emphasis on the regulation of the cell cycle differentiation programmed cell death apoptosis and genetics of cancer This book constitutes the proceedings of that meeting Specifically the following areas were addressed a enzymes and proteins cyclins that control the cell cycle as well as the role of m as gene in meiosis and transformation b the structural basis for specificity in protein tyrosine kinase reactions c the differentiation of normal as well as neoplastic cells with respect to molecular mechanism s by which chemical agents or growth factors trigger maturation d phenotypic and genetic aspects of apoptosis e the role of growth factors like IGF I FGF TN IL 6 etc in cell cycle regulation apoptosis cell death and senescence f molecular mechanisms of transcriptional activation of globin genes and stability of mRNAs related to growth proteins and iron metabolism g the cellular and molecular biology of bone marrow hemopoiesis and h neurotrophic factors and the generation of cellular diversity in the central nervous system It was obvious from the studies presented that neoplastic cell growth differentiation and apoptosis in many cell types are regulated at several levels

Growth Factors and Their Receptors in Cell Differentiation, Cancer and Cancer Therapy G V Sherbet, 2011-07-12

Recent years have seen a considerable emphasis on growth factors and the elucidation of their mode of function which has led to the recognition that growth factors their receptors as well as downstream elements of signalling associated with their function might be potential targets in therapeutic management of human diseases Humanised monoclonal antibodies raised against growth factor receptors have proved to be valuable for targeted cancer treatment and in patient management This book reviews the latest developments providing insights into the signalling processes involved in morphogenesis and pathogenesis with emphasis on using the elements of the signalling cascades as targets for therapeutic deployment Provides a fundamental understanding of the basic functions of growth factors and their receptors describing how they are linked in biological processes Aids the development of therapeutic treatments for cancer Focuses on the interrelationships and convergence of growth factors and their receptors in development and pathogenesis and encourages greater cooperation and integration in the areas of developmental cancer and cancer therapeutic research The Status of Differentiation Therapy of Cancer Giovanni B. Rossi, Fumimaro Takaku, 1991 Cell Differentiation, Genes and Cancer International Agency for Research on Cancer, 1988 The control of cell differentiation at the genetic level is fundamental to both normal growth of tissues and abnormal growth characteristic of tumors This volume reviews recent developments in the areas of molecular and cell biology which relate to the role of critical genes in carcinogenesis Leading researchers in the field of cancer research discuss aberrant cell differentiation somatic cell genetics cell to cell interaction in relation to tumor promotion and the role of oncogenes and cellular genes in differentiation Several critical genes responsible for carcinogenesis have been identified

Genetics, Cell Differentiation, and Cancer Paul A. Marks, 1985 Asymmetric Cell Division in Development, Differentiation and Cancer Jean-Pierre Tassan, Jacek Z. Kubiak, 2017-04-12 This book provides readers with an overview of the frequent occurrence of asymmetric cell division Employing a broad range of examples it highlights how this mode of cell division constitutes the basis of multicellular organism development and how its misregulation can lead to cancer To underline such developmental correlations readers will for example gain insights into stem cell fate and tumor growth In turn subsequent chapters include descriptions of asymmetric cell division from unicellular organisms to humans in both physiological and pathological conditions The book also illustrates the importance of this process for evolution and our need to understand the background mechanisms offering a valuable guide not only for students in the field of developmental biology but also for experienced researchers from neighboring fields
