Recovering The Nations Body Cultural Memory Medicine And The Politics Of Redemption:

Recovering the Nation's Body Linda F. Hogle, 1999 This text analyzes the practices involved in procuring human tissue and examines how the German past and present day situation within the European Union are key in understanding the form that medical practices take within various contexts

Recovering the Nation's Body Linda F. Hogle, 1999 The body is both a site for medical practice and a source of therapeutic and scientific tools As such there are a variety of meanings ascribed to the body which both affect and are affected by cultural economic political and legal complexities In order to access and use body parts Linda F Hogle states transformative scientific and cultural processes are brought into play Nowhere is this more evident than present day Germany where the spectre of Nazi medical experimentation still plays a large role in national policies governing the use of body parts and the way these policies are put into practice In their efforts to be perceived as not repeating atrocities of the past German medical practitioners and policy makers reformulate ideas of bodily violation To further confuse the issue the reunification of East and West Germany has engendered new questions about the relationship between individuals bodies science and the state Hogle shows how universal medicine is reinterpreted through the lens of national and transnational politics and history using comparative examples from her research in the United States Recovering the Nation's Body is the first book to analyze the actual practices involved in procuring human tissue and the first to examine how the German past and the unique present day situation within the European Union are key in understanding the form that medical practices take within various contexts

Deconstructing South Park Brian Cogan, 2011-12-16 Deconstructing South Park Critical Examinations of Animated Transgression is an edited collection by Brian Cogan that looks at the long and controversial run of one of the most subversive programs on television South Park while denounced by many as simply scatological is actually one of the most nuanced and thoughtful programs on television The contributors to South Park reveal that through the lens of four foul mouthed nine year olds Trey Parker and Matt Stone have created one of the most astute forms of social and political commentary in television history Deconstructing South Park itself the most ambitious deconstruction of popular culture to date analyzes how South Park is not only entertainment but a commentary on American culture that tackles controversial issues far beyond the depth of most television Specifically the medium of animated sitcom allows the show's creators to contribute to cultural conversations regarding disability studies religion sexuality celebrity and more If South Park deconstructs American culture then Cogan and his contributors deconstruct the deconstructionists and reveal South Park in all its hilarious and often contradictory complexity

Immobility and Medicine Cecilia Vindrola-Padros, Bruno Vindrola-Padros, Kyle Lee-Crossett, 2020-10-02

Recent work in the mobilities literature has highlighted the importance of thinking about mobility and immobility as a continuum where movement intersects with processes that might entail episodes of transition waiting emptiness and fixity

This focus on stillness things that are stuck incomplete or in a state of transition can point to new theoretical methodological and practical dimensions in social studies of medicine

This edited volume brings the concept of immobility to the forefront of social studies of medicine to explore how immobility shapes processes of medical care and the theoretical and methodological challenges of studying immobility in medical contexts

The authors in this volume draw from a wide range of case studies across the globe to make contributions to our current understanding of health illness and medicine mobilities and immobilities

Strange Harvest Lesley A. Sharp, 2006-10-04 Illuminates the wondrous yet disquieting medical realm of organ transplantation by drawing on the voices of those most deeply involved transplant recipients clinical specialists and the surviving kin of deceased organ donors This ethnographic study explores how these parties think about death loss and mourning

Domesticating Organ Transplant Megan Crowley-Matoka, 2016-03-10 Organ transplant in Mexico is overwhelmingly a family matter utterly dependent on kidneys from living relatives not from stranger donors typical elsewhere Yet Mexican transplant is also a public affair that is proudly performed primarily in state run hospitals In Domesticating Organ Transplant Megan Crowley Matoka examines the intimate dynamics and complex politics of kidney transplant drawing on extensive fieldwork with patients families medical professionals and government and religious leaders in Guadalajara Weaving together haunting stories and sometimes surprising statistics culled from hundreds of transplant cases she offers nuanced insight into the way iconic notions about mothers miracles and mestizos shape how some lives are saved and others are risked through transplantation Crowley Matoka argues that as familial donors render transplant culturally familiar this fraught form of medicine is deeply enabled in Mexico by its domestication as both private matter of home and proud product of the nation Analyzing the everyday effects of transplant's own iconic power as an intervention that exemplifies medicine's death-defying promise and commodifying perils Crowley Matoka illuminates how embodied experience clinical practice and national identity produce one another

An Anthropology of Biomedicine Margaret Lock, Vinh-Kim Nguyen, 2010-04-26 An Anthropology of Biomedicine is an exciting new introduction to

biomedicine and its global implications Focusing on the ways in which the application of biomedical technologies bring about radical changes to societies at large cultural anthropologist Margaret Lock and her co author physician and medical anthropologist Vinh Kim Nguyen develop and integrate the thesis that the human body in health and illness is the elusive product of nature and culture that refuses to be pinned down Introduces biomedicine from an anthropological perspective exploring the entanglement of material bodies with history environment culture and politics Develops and integrates an original theory that the human body in health and illness is not an ontological given but a moveable malleable entity Makes extensive use of historical and contemporary ethnographic materials around the globe to illustrate the importance of this methodological approach Integrates key new research data with more classical material covering the management of epidemics famines fertility and birth by military doctors from colonial times on Uses numerous case studies to illustrate concepts such as the global commodification of human bodies and body parts modern forms of population and the extension of biomedical technologies into domestic and intimate domains Winner of the 2010 Prose Award for Archaeology and Anthropology

Complementary and Alternative Medicine Caragh Brosnan, Pia Vuolanto, Jenny-Ann Brodin Danell, 2018-03-26 This book examines how complementary and alternative medicine CAM as knowledge philosophy and practice is constituted by and transformed through broader social developments Shifting the sociological focus away from CAM as a stable entity that elicits perceptions and experiences chapters explore the forms that CAM takes in different settings how global social transformations elicit varieties of CAM and how CAM philosophies and practices are co produced in the context of social change Through engagement with frameworks from Science and Technology Studies STS CAM is reconceptualised as a set of practices and knowledge making processes and opened up to new forms of analysis Part 1 of the book explores how and why boundaries within CAM and between CAM and other health practices are being constructed challenged and changed Part 2 asks how CAM as material practice is shaped by politics and regulation in a range of national settings Part 3 examines how evidence is being produced and used in CAM research and practice Including studies of CAM in Eastern and Western Europe Asia and North and South America the volume will appeal to postgraduate students researchers and health practitioners

Living with Alzheimer's Renée L. Beard, 2016-04-26 News of Alzheimer's disease is constantly in the headlines Every day we hear heart wrenching stories of people caring for a loved one who has become a shell of their former self of projections about rising incidence rates and of cures that are just around the corner However we don't see or hear from the people who actually have the disease In Living with Alzheimer's Renée L Beard argues that the exclusively negative portrayals of Alzheimer's are grossly inaccurate To understand what life with memory loss is really like Beard draws on intensive observations of nearly 100 seniors undergoing cognitive evaluation as well as post diagnosis interviews with individuals experiencing late in life forgetfulness Since we all forget sometimes seniors with an Alzheimer's diagnosis ultimately need to be socialized into medicalized interpretations of their forgetfulness In daily life people with the disease are forced to manage stigma and the presumption of incompetence on top of the actual symptoms of their ailment. The well-meaning public and not their dementia becomes the major barrier to a happy life for those affected. Beard also examines how these perceptions affect treatment for Alzheimer's. Interviews with clinicians and staff from the Alzheimer's Association reveal that despite the best of intentions, pejorative framings of life with dementia fuel both clinical practice and advocacy efforts. These professionals perpetuate narratives about self-loss, impending cures, and the economic and emotional burden to families and society, even if they do not personally believe them. Yet Beard also concludes that in spite of these trends, most of the diagnosed individuals in her study achieve a graceful balance between accepting the medical label and resisting the social stigma that accompanies it. In stark contrast to the messages we receive, this book provides an unprecedented view into the ways that people with early Alzheimer's actively and deliberately navigate their lives.
