Retraining the Work Force Ida R. Hoos, 2023-04-28 Retraining the Work Force , Retraining the Work Force
Ida R. Hoos, 1967 No One Left Behind Twentieth Century Fund. Task Force on Retraining America's Workforce, Carl E. Van Horn, 1996 This book identifies government and corporate strategies that could continuously strengthen the skills and knowledge of workers and enhance the productivity of the American workforce raising prospects for higher U S corporate profitability and economic growth The report was prepared by a task force comprised of representatives from business labor government and academia The Public Health Workforce Public Health Functions Project (U.S.), 1997 Learning to Work W. Norton Grubb, 1996-05-30 Grubb s powerful vision of a workforce development system connected by vertical ladders for upward mobility adds an important new dimension to our continued efforts at system reform The unfortunate reality is that neither our first chance education system nor our second chance job training system have succeeded in creating clear pathways out of poverty for many of our citizens Grubb s message deserves a serious hearing by policy makers and practitioners alike Evelyn Ganzglass National Governors Association Over the past three decades job training programs have proliferated in response to mounting problems of unemployment poverty and expanding welfare rolls These programs and the institutions that administer them have grown to a number and complexity that make it increasingly difficult for policymakers to interpret their effectiveness Learning to Work offers a comprehensive assessment of efforts to move individuals into the workforce and explains why their success has been limited Learning to Work offers a complete history of job training in the United States beginning with the Department of Labor s manpower development programs in the 1960s and detailing the expansion of services through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act in the 1970s and the Job Training Partnership Act in the 1980s Other programs have sprung from the welfare system or were designed to meet the needs of various state and corporate development initiatives The result is a complex mosaic of welfare to work second chance training and experimental programs all with their own goals methodology institutional administration and funding Learning to Work examines the findings of the most recent and sophisticated job training evaluations and what they reveal for each type of program Which agendas prove most effective Do their effects last over time How well do programs benefit various populations from welfare recipients to youths to displaced employees in need of retraining The results are not encouraging Many programs increase employment and reduce welfare dependence but by meager increments and the results are often temporary On average most programs boosted earnings by only 200 to 500 per year and even these small effects tended to decay after four or five years Overall job training programs moved very few individuals permanently off welfare and provided no entry into a middle class occupation or income Learning to Work provides possible explanations for these poor results citing the limited scope of individual programs their lack of linkages to other programs or job related opportunities the absence of academic content or solid instructional methods and their vulnerability to local political interference Author

Norton Grubb traces the root of these problems to the inherent separation of job training programs from the more successful educational system. He proposes consolidating the two domains into a clearly defined hierarchy of programs that combine school and work based instruction and employ proven methods of student centered project based teaching. By linking programs tailored to every level of need and replacing short term job training with long term education a system could be created to enable individuals to achieve increasing levels of economic success. The problems that job training programs address are too serious to ignore. Learning to Work tells us what's wrong with job training today and offers a practical vision for reform.

The tools and technologies surveyed within these pages will help employers take their workers beyond the transient skill sets offered by university degrees and into a constant state of learning and practice that will enhance both their productivity and technical abilities on a regular basis. U.S. Trade Competitiveness and Work Force Education and Training United States. Congress. House. Committee on Ways and Means. Subcommittee on Trade, 1997. This document reports the oral and written testimony submitted at a Congressional hearing on ways in which the government, business and industry are working to improve the competitiveness of the U.S. work force through education and training initiatives. Witnesses included the following: U.S. Secretary of Labor Robert Reich, U.S. Department of Education Assistant Secretary David Longanecker, Thomas Bailey, Columbia University Institute on Education and the Economy, Howard Rosen, Competitiveness Policy Council, Howard Samuel, Council on Competitiveness, Stanley Litow, IBM Foundation, Roberts Jones, National Alliance of Business, Leo Reddy, National Coalition for Advanced Manufacturing and Sanford Weill, Travelers Group, New York. Their testimony focused on the need for national policy initiatives to reform schools and job training to produce a competitive work force with the skills needed for the next century. They suggested earlier emphasis on acquiring skills needed on the job, more focus on career education at earlier grades and the necessity for employer input into the school mission. Programs that are fulfilling these ideals were described and the necessity for more collaborative efforts was emphasized. KC
