Reporting War Stuart Allan, Barbie Zelizer, 2004-06-01 Reporting War explores the social responsibilities of the journalist during times of military conflict News media treatments of international crises especially the one underway in Iraq are increasingly becoming the subject of public controversy and discussion is urgently needed Each of this book's contributors challenges familiar assumptions about war reporting from a distinctive perspective An array of pressing issues associated with conflicts over recent years are identified and critiqued always with an eye to what they can tell us about improving journalism today. Special attention is devoted to recent changes in journalistic forms and practices and the ways in which they are shaping the visual culture of war and issues discussed amongst many include the influence of censorship and propaganda and the news narratives, access to sources, 24/7 rolling news and the CNN effect, military jargon such as friendly fire and collateral damage, embedded and unilateral reporters, tensions between objectivity and patriotism. The book raises important questions about the very future of journalism during wartime questions which demand public dialogue and debate and is essential reading for students taking courses in news and news journalism as well as for researchers, teachers and practitioners in the field.

Shoot First and Ask Questions Later Justin Lewis, 2006. Based on extensive original research, Shoot First and Ask Questions Later provides a comprehensive analysis of media coverage of the war in Iraq in 2003. The authors look closely at the main actors involved through a broad range of interviews with journalists both embedded and non-embedded, news editors, news heads and with key planners at the Pentagon and the UK Ministry of Defence. This book also investigates how the war was represented on television, employing both a systematic content analysis of the broadcast news coverage of the war and a series of case studies that unravel key moments of good and bad reporting during the war. Finally, it examines how people responded to and interpreted the information they received from the media, drawing upon both large scale surveys and focus groups. What emerges for all its blemishes is a picture of a sophisticated military public relations campaign, one that had less to do with censorship than with promoting certain kinds of coverage. At the heart of this was the embedded journalists program which has clearly changed the way war is reported. In future, the authors argue, journalists need to understand their role in this public relations effort and to ask questions not only when access is denied but also when it is granted.

Intelligence Cooperation and the War on Terror Adam D.M. Svendsen, 2009-10-16. This book provides an in-depth analysis of UK-US intelligence cooperation in the post 9/11 world. Seeking to connect an analysis of intelligence liaison with the wider realm of Anglo-American Relations, the book draws on a wide range of interviews and consultations with key actors in both countries. The book is centred around two critical and empirical case studies focusing on the interactions on the key issues of counterterrorism and weapons of mass destruction (WMD) counter-proliferation. These case studies provide substantive insights into a range of interactions such as 9/11, the 7/7 London bombings, the A.Q. Khan nuclear network, the prelude to the 2003 Iraq War, extraordinary rendition and special forces deployments. Drawing on over 60 interviews conducted in the UK and US with prominent decision makers and practitioners, these issues are examined in the contemporary historical context with the main focus being on the years 2000-05. This book will be of much interest to students of intelligence studies, foreign policy, security studies and International Relations in general. Adam Svendsen has a PhD in International History from the University of Warwick. He has been a Visiting Scholar at the Center for Peace and Security Studies, Georgetown University, and has contributed to the International Security Programme at Chatham House and
