Lovelace,2011-12-21 Caribbean Cooking Made Simple is a cookbook memoir containing 125 recipes from 17 Caribbean islands But the book is more than a cookbook that showcases meals and beverages of the Caribbean It tells the story of how Pat Lovelace created a menu to satisfy the sophisticated tastes of guests visiting Pat and Guy s upscale boutique hotel The book also chronicles her experiences on the islands where she collected the recipes Pat and her husband built The Windmills Plantation on the remote island of Salt Cay in the Turks and Caicos in the 1980s This was well before those islands became a prime tourist destination that they are today The island government sold the land for the project to Pat and her husband Guy contingent upon their using only local help to build and operate the hotel Pat s kitchen staff was therefore selected from local women who had no culinary experience other than cooking simple island meals in their homes The task was further complicated by the fact that all food items other than conch lobster grouper and hog snapper had to be flown from the US to the island of Grand Turk clear customs there and then be loaded onto a small plane for transport to Salt Cay After which it would be trucked to the hotel All of the above was subject to inevitable island delays and mess ups Fresh and frozen foods did not survive the ordeal Pat was limited to canned food and vegetables that could be stored without refrigeration She was able to use only a few frozen items that she could carry in cooler boxes with her luggage on her monthly buying trips to Miami Using recipes she collected while visiting 32 Caribbean islands with her resort architect husband she created her Tour of the Caribbean menu The menu took a culinary journey to a different Caribbean island for lunch and dinner every day The recipes had to be simple enough for her staff to understand and execute The positive guest reaction from Pat s culinary tour de force is documented in hundreds of letters of praise from her guests and their requests to food magazines for recipes Top 100 Food Plants Ernest Small,2009 This beautifully illustrated book reviews scientific and technological information about the world s major food plants and their culinary uses An introductory chapter discusses nutritional and other fundamental scientific aspects of plant foods The 100 main chapters deal with a particular species or group of species All categories of food plants are covered including cereals oilseeds fruits nuts vegetables legumes herbs spices beverage plants and sources of industrial food extracts Information is provided on scientific and common names appearance history economic and social importance food uses including practical information on storage and preparation as well as notable curiosities There are more than 3000 literature citations in the book and the text is complemented by over 250 exquisitely drawn illustrations Given the current alarming rise in food costs and increasing risk of hunger in many regions specialists in diverse fields will find this reference work to be especially useful As well those familiar with Dr Small s books or those with an interest in gardening cooking and human health in relation to diet will want to own a copy of this book Publisher s web site Don't Stop the Cook ,2008 Don t stop the cook Recipes made with mangoes papayas soursop coconuts avocados plantains and seafood from the Caribbean waters Don t stop the cook is a total Caribbean Island preparation guide Caribbean Cooking Made Simple Patricia Wray Lovelace,S. Guy Lovelace,2011-12-21 Because of the high cost of publishing a book containing over 70 color photographs raised the cost of the color edition beyond the reach of many readers I decided to publish a lower priced edition using black and white photographs It is the same cookbook memoir that contains 125 recipes from 17 Caribbean islands It is still more than a cookbook that showcases meals and beverages of the Caribbean It is unchanged from the memoir that tells the story of how Pat Lovelace created a menu to satisfy the sophisticated tastes of guests visiting Pat and Guy's upscale boutique hotel The book is still a chronicle of her experiences on the islands where she collected the recipes Pat and her husband built The Windmills Plantation on the remote island of Salt Cay in the Turks and Caicos in the 1980's This was well before those islands became the prime tourist destination that they are today The island government sold the land for the project to Pat and her husband contingent upon their using only local help to build and operate the hotel Pat's kitchen staff was therefore selected from local women who had no culinary experience other than cooking simple island meals in their homes The task was further complicated by the fact that all food items other than conch lobster and fish had to be flown from the US to the island of Grand Turk clear customs and then be loaded onto a ferryboat for transport to Salt Cay After which it would eventually be trucked to the hotel Fresh and frozen foods did not survive the ordeal Pat was limited to canned food and vegetables that could be stored without refrigeration She was able to use only the few frozen items that she could carry in cooler boxes with her luggage on her monthly buying trips to Miami Using recipes she had collected while visiting 32 Caribbean islands with her resort architect husband she created her Tour of the Caribbean menu The recipes had to be simple enough for her staff to understand and execute yet good enough to please the palates of her guests The positive reaction to Pat's culinary tour de force is documented in hundreds of letters of praise from her guests and their requests to food magazines for Pat's recipes
