Personal Recollections of Abraham Lincoln and the Civil War James Roberts Gilmore, 2013-09 This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher Not indexed Not illustrated 1898 edition Excerpt CHAPTER VIII MY CONNECTION WITH THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE The purpose for which I had established the Continental Monthly was accomplished by the issue of President Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation The North had at first taken up arms to maintain the Union regardless of the extension or non extension of slavery but gradually a majority of the people had come to the conclusion that the life of the nation could not be preserved without the total extinction of the peculiar institution Of this I had been convinced by the general acclaim with which the Northern press had greeted the Emancipation Proclamation but I soon had stronger evidence of it from personal contact with the people through a series of lectures that I delivered before literary associations in all the larger cities of the North This revolution in public sentiment had been mainly brought about by the irresistible logic of events the slow progress of the war and the long series of disasters that had attended the Union armies but though the people had thus been schooled by events they had doubtless been largely influenced by the bold utterances of Charles G Leland in the Continental Monthly which had been scattered broadcast over the North Clear sighted statesmen had from the beginning seen that the real issue was the permanent establishment or the entire extinction of slavery but Leland was the first to tell this truth to the people and he told it in words that rang through the North like the notes of a bugle With his whole heart and soul he had entered the conflict His friends had counselled him to moderate his tone William H Seward had rewarded his zeal with the elegant anathema Damn Leland and the Continental and even Robert J Walker had
