Jelen, Michael P. Kramer, L. Scott Lerner, 2011-06-06 Is there such a thing as a distinctive Jewish literature While definitions have been offered none has been universally accepted Modern Jewish literature lacks the basic markers of national literatures it has neither a common geography nor a shared language though works in Hebrew or Yiddish are almost certainly included and the field is so diverse that it cannot be contained within the bounds of one literary category Each of the fifteen essays collected in Modern Jewish Literatures takes on the above question by describing a movement across boundaries between languages cultures genres or spaces Works in Hebrew and Yiddish are amply represented but works in English French German Italian Ladino and Russian are also considered Topics range from the poetry of the Israeli nationalist Natan Alterman to the Russian poet Osip Mandelstam from turn of the century Ottoman Jewish journalism to wire recorded Holocaust testimonies from the intellectual salons of late eighteenth century Berlin to the shelves of a Jewish bookstore in twentieth century Los Angeles The literary world described in Modern Jewish Literatures is demarcated chronologically by the Enlightenment the Haskalah and the French Revolution on one end and the fiftieth anniversary of the State of Israel on the other The particular terms of the encounter between a Jewish past and present for modern Jews has varied greatly by continent country or village by language and by social standing among other things What unites the subjects of these studies is not a common ethnic religious or cultural history but rather a shared endeavor to use literary production and writing in general as the laboratory in which to explore and represent Jewish experience in the modern world

Writing in Red Nergis Ertürk, 2024-05-21 The republic of Turkey and the Soviet Union both emerged from the wreckage of empires surrounding World War I and pathways of literary exchange soon opened between the two revolutionary states Even as the Turkish government pursued a friendly relationship with the USSR it began to persecute communist writers Whether going through official channels or fleeing repression many Turkish writers traveled to the Soviet Union during the 1920s and 1930s publishing original work editing prominent literary journals and translating both Russian classics and Soviet literature into Turkish Writing in Red traces the literary and exilic itineraries of Turkish communist and former communist writers examining revolutionary aesthetics and politics across Turkey and the Soviet Union from the mid 1920s through the 1960s Nergis Ertürk considers a wide range of texts spanning genres such as erotic comedy historical fiction and film and socialist realist novels and theater by writers including Nâzım Hikmet Vâfâ Nureddin Nizamettin Nazif Suat Dervi and Abidin Dino She argues that these works belong simultaneously to modern Turkish literature a transnational Soviet republic of letters and the global literary archive of world revolution alongside those of other writers who made the magic pilgrimage to Moscow Exploring how Turkish communist writers on the run produced a remarkable transnational literature of dissent Writing in Red offers a new account of global revolutionary literary culture The Black and Red, 1916
