Seydou Keita Seydou Keita, André Magnin, Youssouf Tata Cissé, 1997 Keita photographed the inhabitants of Bamako capital of Mali throughout the 1950s and 1960s The collective effect here displays a very determined aesthetic You Look Beautiful Like that Michelle Lamunière, Seydou Keita, Malick Sidibé, 2001 Seydou Keita and Malick Sidibé two commercial photographers from Mali took mesmerizing portraits in Bamako the capital during the period before and after the country achieved independence from France in 1960 This book presents a range of these portraits as well as excerpts from recent interviews with the artists and an essay placing their work in the context of the history of portrait photography in West Africa since its beginnings in the 1840s These photographs are the work of Africans controlling the camera to create images of African subjects for an African audience For both photographers the studio was a theater in which to coordinate costumes lighting props and poses to help the subjects define themselves Keita adapted the formulas of portrait photography to make unique images that reflect both his clients social identity within the community and their enthusiastic embrace of modernity Later as portrait conventions and societal roles became more flexible Sidibé's subjects took an even more active part in constructing the images they wanted to convey In Bambara the language widely spoken in Mali there is an expression ika nye tan which means you look beautiful like that Keita's and Sidibé's portraits flatter the sitters presenting them in the best possible light BOOK JACKET Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America Inc All Rights Reserved Seydou Keita, Photographer, 1996 Navigating the African Diaspora Donald Martin Carter, 2010 Investigating how the fraught political economy of migration impacts people around the world Donald Martin Carter raises important issues about contemporary African diasporic movements Developing the notion of the anthropology of invisibility he explores the trope of navigation in social theory intent on understanding the lived experiences of transnational migrants Carter examines invisibility in its various forms from social rejection and residential segregation to war memorials and the inability of some groups to represent themselves through popular culture scholarship or art The pervasiveness of invisibility is not limited to symbolic actions Carter shows but may have dramatic and at times catastrophic consequences for people subjected to its force The geographic span of his analysis is global encompassing Senegalese Muslims in Italy and the United States and concluding with practical questions about the future of European societies Carter also considers both contemporary and historical constellations of displacement from Darfurian refugees to French West African colonial soldiers Whether focusing on historical photographs television print media and graffiti scrawled across urban walls or identifying the critique of colonialism implicit in African films and literature Carter reveals a protean and peopled world in motion You Look Beautiful Like that Michelle Lamunière, 2001 Seydou Keita and Malick Sidibé two important and widely known commercial photographers from Mali took mesmerizing photographs of members of their communities during the decades before and after the country's independence from France in 1960 This book presents a range of these portraits as well as excerpts of recent interviews with the artists and an essay placing the photographers within the context of the history of portrait photography in West Africa since its beginnings in the 1840s In contrast to the early photographs of Africans produced by Western colonial powers Ke ta and Sidib s photographs represent the work of Africans controlling the camera to create images of African subjects for an African audience Ke ta combined formulas of Western portrait photography with local aesthetics to create images that reflect both his clients social identity and status within the community and an enthusiastic embrace of modernity Later as portrait conventions and societal roles became more flexible Sidib s subjects took a more active part in constructing the images of themselves that they wanted to convey Africans have valued photography for its unique ability to capture a person s likeness which says Sidib was regarded as more eternal than the subjects themselves This book is a striking collection of such likenesses Publisher s website viewed August 23 2018 The African
