The Craft of Fiction David Letzler, 2017-06 A 2017 Choice Outstanding Academic Title What is the strange appeal of big books The mega novel a genre of erudite tomes with encyclopedic scope has attracted wildly varied responses from fanatical devotion to trenchant criticism Looking at intimidating mega novel masterpieces from The Making of Americans to 2666 David Letzler explores reader responses to all the seemingly random irrelevant pointless and derailing elements that comprise these mega novels elements that he labels craft after the computer science term for junk code In The Craft of Fiction Letzler suggests that these books are useful tools to help us understand the relationship between reading and attention While mega novel text is often intricately meaningful or experimental sometimes it is just excessive and pointless On the other hand mega novels also contain text that though appearing to be craft turns out to be quite important Letzler posits that this craft requires readers to develop a sophisticated method of attentional modulation allowing one to subtly distinguish between text requiring focused attention and text that must be skimmed or even skipped to avoid processing failures The Craft of Fiction shows how the attentional maturation prompted by reading mega novels can help manage the information overload that increasingly characterizes contemporary life

The Power of Words David S. Kaufer, Suguru Ishizaki, Brian S. Butler, Jeff Collins, 2004-02-04 In 1888 Mark Twain reflected on the writer's special feel for words to his correspondent George Bainton noting that the difference between the almost right word and the right word is really a large matter We recognize differences between a politician who is willful and one who is willing even though the difference does not cross word stems or parts of speech We recognize that being held up evokes different experiences depending upon whether its direct object is a meeting a bank or an example Although we can notice hundreds of examples in the language where small differences in wording produce large reader effects the authors of The Power of Words argue that these examples are random glimpses of a hidden systematic knowledge that governs how we as writers or speakers learn to shape experience for other human beings Over the past several years David Kaufer and his colleagues have developed a software program for analyzing writing called DocuScope This book illustrates the concepts and rhetorical theory behind the software analysis examining patterns in writing and showing writers how their writing works in different categories to accomplish varying objectives Reflecting the range and variety of audience experience that contiguous words of surface English can prime the authors present a theory of language as an instrument of rhetorically priming audiences and a catalog of English strings to implement the theory The project creates a comprehensive map of the speaker and writer s implicit knowledge about predisposing audience experience at the point of utterance The book begins with an explanation of why studying language from the standpoint of priming not just meaning is vital to non question begging theories of close reading and to language education in general The remaining chapters in Part I detail the steps taken to prepare a catalog study of English strings for their properties as priming instruments Part II describes in detail the catalog of priming categories including enough examples to help readers see how individual words and strings of English fit into the catalog The final part describes how the authors have applied the catalog of English strings as priming tools to conduct textual research Bestseller
