Reading Development in Chinese Children Catherine McBride-Chang, Hsuan-Chih Chen, 2003-12-30 This text reviews both similarities and unique cultural linguistic and script differences of Chinese relative to alphabetic reading and even across Chinese regions Chinese reading acquisition relies upon children's strongly developing analytic skills as highlighted here These 16 chapters present state of the art research on diverse aspects of Chinese children's reading development This edited volume presents research on Chinese children's reading development across Chinese societies Authors from China Hong Kong Singapore and Taiwan among others present the latest findings on how Chinese children learn to read Reading acquisition in Chinese involves some parameters typically not encountered in some other orthographies such as English For example Chinese readers in different regions might speak different mutually unintelligible languages be taught to read with or without the aid of a phonetic coding system and learn different scripts This book both implicitly and explicitly considers these and other contextual issues in relation to developmental and cognitive factors involved in Chinese literacy acquisition One of the clearest themes to emerge from this volume is that across regions Chinese children despite lack of explicit teaching of phonetic or semantic character components learn to read largely by integrating visible print sound and print meaning connections Rather than learning to read Chinese characters by rote as is sometimes mistakenly believed these children are analytic learners Chapters in this book also cover such topics as Chinese children's reading comprehension cognitive characteristics of good and poor readers and reading strategies of bilingual and bicultural readers This book is a useful reference for anyone interested in understanding either developing or skilled reading of Chinese or for those interested in literacy learning across cultures Reading Development and Difficulties in Monolingual and Bilingual Handbook of Orthography and Literacy R. Malatesha Joshi,P.G.

Aaron,2013-05-13 Until about two decades ago the study of writing systems and their relationship to literacy acquisition was sparse and generally modeled after studies of English language learners This situation is now changing As the worldwide demand for literacy continues to grow researchers from different countries with different language backgrounds have begun examining the connection between their writing systems and literacy acquisition This text which derives from a NATO sponsored conference on orthography and literacy brings together the research of 70 scholars from across the world the largest assemblage of such experts to date Their findings are grouped into three parts as follows Part I Literacy Acquisition in Different Writing Systems describes the relationship between orthography and literacy in twenty five orthographic systems This section serves as a handy reference source for understanding the orthographies of languages as diverse as Arabic Chinese English Icelandic Kannada and Kishwahili Part II Literacy Acquisition From a Cross Linguistic Perspective makes direct comparisons of literacy acquisition in English and other orthographic systems The overall conclusion that emerges from these eight chapters is that the depth of an orthographic system does influence literacy acquisition primarily by slowing down the acquisition of reading skills Even so studies show that dyslexic readers can be found across all orthographic systems whether shallow or deep which shows that dyslexia also has internal cognitive and biological components Part III Literacy Acquisition Instructional Perspectives explores literacy acquisition from developmental and instructional perspectives and ends with a look into the future of literacy research This Handbook is appropriate for scholars researchers and graduate students in such diverse fields as cognitive psychology psycholinguistics literacy education English as a second language and communication disorders The Science of Reading Margaret J.
