Whittaker, 1990 Focusing on a program Homebuilders that has attracted national attention this book develops implications for family centered curricula in such areas as social policy direct practice program design management practice research theory and prevention Reaching High-risk Families J.K. Whittaker, 1990-01-01 Does Family Preservation Serve a Child's Best Interests? Howard Altstein, Ruth G. McRoy, 2000-08-02 In this new volume two distinguished professors of social work debate the question of whether family preservation or adoption serves the best interests of abused and neglected children Arguing the merits of keeping families together whenever possible Ruth G McRoy examines the background theory and effectiveness of family preservation programs She provides practical recommendations and pays particular attention to the concerns of African American children Claiming that there is insufficient evidence that family preservation actually works Howard Altstein counters that children from truly dysfunctional families should be given the chance for stable lives through adoption rather than left in limbo Children and Families in the Social Environment James Garbarino, 2017-07-12 The first edition of this volume successfully applied Bronfenbrenner's micro systems taxonomy to childrearing and family life Emphasizing how forces in the environment influence children's behavior Garbarino has staked out an intermediate position between the psychoanalytic and the systems approach to human development Taking cognizance of new research and of changes in American society Garbarino has once again carefully analyzed the importance of children's social relationships For this wholly revised second edition he has incorporated a greater emphasis on ethnic cultural and racial issues Family Systems Application to Social Work Karen Gail Lewis, 2015-07-24 Originally published in 1991 this title is a valuable social work text which demonstrated how to apply family system concepts to clinical situations encountered in work with inner city populations at the time Unlike traditional theories in clinical social work which were oriented toward the individual this fascinating book offers a paradigm for social work that encompasses the client his or her immediate and extended family the community the government and the social worker The family systems concepts in this refreshing volume are illustrated by case examples addressing the specific issues of AIDS and drug abuse homelessness foster care wife abuse care of those with intellectual disabilities and adoption issues Social workers and social work students can still gain perspective from these insightful chapters and will discover that it is not pathological people that make difficult populations but difficult life situations that

Pecora, 2018-02-06 Family based service FBS programs have been developing rapidly across the country at a time of increasingly scarce human resources and in a politically volatile climate. Such a context has made evaluation of such programs imperative. The present volume reviews basic elements of evaluation in the light of current knowledge and then highlights the most useful research instruments for measuring changes in child and family functioning. Chapters focus on evaluation methods that can be employed to determine the success of existing policy and to influence the development of new policy. The authors assume that their readers will have a basic familiarity with research methods and program evaluation. They discuss the challenges they have encountered in conducting extensive research on family preservation, family support and other related programs and pose practical solutions for administrators, practitioners and evaluators confronted with similar difficult issues. Each chapter presents a brief conceptual framework for understanding issues related to assessment. Essential elements are reviewed while research design, measurement variables and qualitative and quantitative analyses are discussed in turn. The book concludes with a review of the limitations of evaluations.

Assessing Outcomes in Child and Family Services Anthony N. Maluccio, Cinzia Canali, Tiziano Vecchiato, In this collective portrait editors and authors do not attempt to draw systematic country by country comparisons. Given the magnitude of the issues they believed that it would be inappropriate to paint with too broad a stroke. What they have accomplished however is to codify and identify what the participants repeatedly noted in regard to issues and difficulties inherent in conducting outcome evaluation. These include varying definitions of outcome complexities in measuring outcomes of particular interventions with different groups of consumers and documenting the effectiveness of the intervention, the tendency to focus on evaluation of process more than outcome, the challenge of involving practitioners in the evaluation task in part because its value is unclear to them or perceived as distant or untrustworthy, the typical inadequacy of resources available for systematic evaluation and the need to inject rigor into the design and execution of evaluation projects. The authors demonstrate strong conviction about sharing research expertise across national boundaries, learning through each other how to cope with organizational impediments to cross national collaboration and strengthening the interaction between practice and research. Their contributions suggest that there is wide interest in pursuing cross national collaboration. In recent years, largely in response to demands by their funding sources for accountability, assessment of performance and cost effectiveness, researchers in human services have been devoting increased attention to outcome evaluation. Limited attention however has been given to the findings of evaluation studies conducted in different countries. The present volume has been organized and edited to address the task of learning from outcome research across the world. Its goal, an extension of a major goal of the human services in any one country, is to improve life chances of vulnerable children and youth. Anthony N. Maluccio is professor of social work at Boston College Graduate School of Social Work, Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts. Cinzia Canali is research associate at the Fondazione Emanuela Zancan, Padua, Italy. Tiziano

Social Policy and Social Work Robert M. Moroney, Judy Krysik, In the short time between the publication of the first edition of this book and the present edition there have been radical changes in the relationships between the public and private sectors and within the public sector among federal state and local governments The first edition examined the perceived dichotomy between two major approaches to social welfare the institutional and residual models arguing that the former assumes a sense of community while the latter is concerned with the extension of rights to the individual In expanding this argument Moroney and Krysik incorporate notions of citizenship suggesting that elements of both approaches can be integrated in such a way that the modified framework attempts to deal with critics from both sides Current data are presented in each of the original chapters and two new chapters cover the areas of health and employment

Involuntary Clients in Social Work Practice Andre Ivanoff, Betty J. Blythe, Tony Tripodi, 2024-11-01 First published in 1994. While not setting out to write a book about social policy, Ivanoff, Blythe, and Tripodi, seasoned and well-known contributors to the spirited debate on the proper relationship of research and practice methods in direct services, have nonetheless delivered much useful commentary on how those direct services resources ought best be deployed. This book is a clear call for commitment of skilled professional resources for those citizens whose serious and often multiple problems have already deeply involved them in public sector services.

Person-Environment Practice Susan P. Kemp, James K. Whittaker, Elizabeth M. Tracy, 2024-11-01 Person-Environment Practice addresses a core but long neglected dimension in social work and human services practice: accurate environmental assessment and strategic environmental intervention. Despite the centrality of person-environment as a key construct in direct practice, the domain of environmental assessment and intervention has received relatively little systematic attention in the practice literature. For a variety of reasons, the core focus of direct practice assessment and change strategies has centered more on person than environment. This book seeks to redress that imbalance. Ironically, the relative lack of attention to environmentally oriented practice persists even as current demands of practice fall increasingly under the rubric of what we here call environmental intervention, defined as both action in the environment and the process of transforming individual and collective perspectives through critical analysis of the impact of environmental conditions. The authors argue that the ability to understand environment from the client's perspective and to function effectively in the environmental domain is central to many emergent areas of practice, such as practice with extended families and personal networks, practice from a strengths perspective, and culturally competent practice. In Person-Environment Practice, the authors offer a coherent critique and overview of environmental assessment and intervention congruent with the demands of both newly emerging and established interpersonal helping approaches within social work's domain. Robert Halpern of the Erikson Institute for Advanced Studies in Child Development described the book as a clear, thoughtful, and subtle discussion of how to consider the environment in interpersonal helping, as I have seen in the literature. And Anthony Maluccio of Boston College called the book a timely and exciting contribution with appreciation and respect for social work practices and qualities of inspiration, as well as intellectual stimulation.
