Reader Response to Literature: the Empirical Dimension

by Elaine F. Nardocchio (ed.), 1992, Mouton de Gruyter, The Hague, pp. 307, ISBN 3 11 01 2764 4

In the last decade the study of reader-response to literature appears to have become mired in increasingly sterile theoretical arguments over whether 'meaning' is to be located in either 'text' or 'reader' (or, in the more sophisticated conceptions, in the social institutions and discourses called upon by such readers). One might therefore assume that this is an area demanding more empirical as well as theoretical attention. As Nardocchio points out in her introduction to Reader Response: the Empirical Dimension there are many theories about the role of the reader and the subjectivity of the reading process about, but to date there have been few studies within reader-response theorising which actually attempt to test reception theories. The volume under discussion, she claims, aims to fill the void by reporting on recent empirical studies of reader response to literary texts.

One wonders, however, whether the particular positivistic methodological paradigm which characterises most of the articles in this collection is appropriate to 'test' the reflexive models of text and response put forward by writers such as Iser and Fish. This issue of epistemology is hardly discussed, although implicit in de Beaugrande's contribution, which could usefully have been placed in an introductory position in the volume. The studies reported are generally from a traditional psychological perspective and are quantitatively and experimentally-based. Most utilise a 'trait' model of personality, and rating and attitude scales are thus favoured means of assessing response: notions of discursive subjectivity have little part to play here. Of recent innovative work utilising psychological approaches (for example, Groeben 1980; Martindale 1988), only Halász (see, also, 1987) is represented in the collection.

Corresponding to this perspective, 'response' is defined in relatively narrow and individualistic terms. Perhaps the most coherent theme in this collection of articles is an interest in emotional responses. Anderson and McMaster, for example, study the clustering of emotive words in poems and other texts (the 'emotion score' derived from the Heise (1965) study of emotional ratings of decontextualised words). Tan and van den Boom ingeniously develop a swingometer for subjects to register their emotional reactions over the course of a film. Halász uses ratings and projections to investigate readers' empathy and identification with literary characters. Potter studies readings of plays, asking her subjects to rate characters on scales such as dominance, emotion etc.
