information gathering and dissemination a topic insufficiently researched by criticism was among his main concerns Greene's fictional work features an array of journalists and the representation of unethical practices of the profession is a constant reference in his narrative In this book I intend to fill this research gap in Greenian studies focusing on three main topics the author's reflection on the journalistic practice in connection with the classic paradigm of objectivity versus empathy his questioning of the misuse of power when gathering and disseminating information by journalists editors and news corporation owners and finally the relationship between journalists and their readership's expectations as well as the importance of fostering critical readers that make informed trustworthy decisions regarding journalism performance

Graham Greene's Thrillers and the 1930s Brian Diemert, 1996-08-27 Diemert traces Greene's adaptation of nineteenth century romance thrillers and classical detective stories into modern political thrillers as a means of presenting serious concerns in an engaging fashion He argues that Greene's popular thrillers were in part a reaction to the high modernism of writers such as James Joyce Gertrude Stein and Virginia Woolf whose esoteric experiments with language were disengaged from immediate social concerns and inaccessible to a large segment of the reading public Graham Greene's Thrillers and the 1930s investigates some of Greene's best known works such as A Gun for Sale Brighton Rock and The Ministry of Fear and shows how they reflect the evolution of Greene's sense of the importance of popular culture in the 1930s
