Making Arms In The Machine Age Philadelphias Frankford Arsenal 1816 187:

Making Arms in the Machine Age James J. Farley, 2008-01-28 Making Arms in the Machine Age traces the growth and development of the United States Arsenal at Frankford Pennsylvania from its origin in 1816 to 1870 During this period the arsenal evolved from a small post where skilled workers hand produced small arms ammunition to a full scale industrial complex employing a large civilian workforce James Farley uses the history of the arsenal to examine larger issues including the changing technology of early nineteenth century warfare the impact of new technology on the United States Army and the reactions of workers and their families and communities to the coming of industrialization Shortly after the War of 1812 the U S Army founded several new arsenals including Frankford to build up supplies of arms and ammunition then in short supply At that time the Army was held in low regard because of its perceived poor performance in the war so the arrival of arsenals was not welcomed By 1870 however the arsenal at Frankford had integrated itself into the community and become a valued and respected member of it Farley argues that the Ordnance Department of the U S Army created an industrial system of manufacture at Frankford well in advance of private industry He also contends that the evolution of the Army into an employer of a large scale civilian workforce helped to end the isolation and anti militarism that plagued it after the War of 1812 Farley s study joins recent work in the history of technology such as Judith McGaw s That Wonderful Machine that seeks to understand technological change in its social and cultural context
