Mitchell,2012-08-08 Fifteen minutes before five o'clock on Good Friday 1998 Senator George Mitchell was informed that his long and difficult quest for an Irish peace accord

had succeeded the Protestants and Catholics of Northern Ireland and the governments of the Republic of Ireland and the United Kingdom would sign the agreement Now Mitchell who served as independent chairman of the peace talks for the length of the process tells us the inside story of the grueling road to this momentous accord For more than two years Mitchell who was Senate majority leader under Presidents Bush and Clinton labored to bring together parties whose mutual hostility after decades of violence and mistrust seemed insurmountable Sinn Fein represented by Gerry Adams the Catholic moderates led by John Hume the majority Protestant party headed by David Trimble Ian Paisley s hard line unionists and not least the governments of the Republic of Ireland and the United Kingdom headed by Bertie Ahern and Tony Blair The world watched as the tense and dramatic process unfolded sometimes teetering on the brink of failure Here for the first time we are given a behind the scenes view of the principal players the personalities who shaped the process and of the contentious at times vitriolic proceedings We learn how as the deadline approached extremist violence and factional intransigence almost drove the talks to collapse And we witness the intensity of the final negotiating session the interventions of Ahern and Blair the late night phone calls from President Clinton a last ditch attempt at disruption by Paisley and ultimately an agreement that despite subsequent inflammatory acts aimed at destroying it has set Northern Ireland s future on track toward a more lasting peace

WAGING WAR, MAKING PEACE American Anthropological Association. Reparations Task Force, 2009 Humans are good at making war and much less successful at making peace Genocide torture slavery and other crimes against humanity are gross violations of human rights that are frequently perpetrated and legitimized in the name of nationalism militarism and economic development This book tackles the question of how to make peace by taking a critical look at the primary political mechanism used to repair the many injuries suffered in war With an explicit focus on reparations and human rights it examines the broad array of abuses being perpetrated in the modern era from genocide to loss of livelihood Based on the experiences of anthropologists and others who document abuses and serve as expert witnesses case studies from around the world offer insight into reparations proceedings the ethical struggles associated with attempts to secure reparations the professional and personal risks to researchers victims and human rights advocates and how to come to terms with the political compromises of reparations in the face of the human need for justice Waging War Making Peace promises to be a major contribution to public policy political science international relations and human rights and peace research

Making Peace with Spain Whitelaw Reid, 2014-09-10 Whitelaw Reid according to H Wayne Morgan was a leading newspaperman more than an occasional diplomat a power in his party s politics a supporter of some of the best in his era s culture Of all his legacy perhaps the record he left of his part in the Peace of Paris is the most significant and most interesting It not only reveals the workings of his mind and of the peace conference but also suggests the complex currents that carried his country into the realities of world power in the twentieth century In editing Reid s diary Morgan used much material pertinent to the Paris Peace Conference of 1898 employed here for the first time This material is a rich assortment of archival matter the Reid Papers the John Hay Papers the John Bassett Moore Papers and the McKinley Papers in the Library of Congress the Peace Commission records in the National Archives and unpublished materials in the Central Files of the Department of State Whitelaw Reid as a war correspondent during the Civil War as clerk of the House Military Affairs Committee and later as a successor to Horace Greeley on the Tribune gained access to the leaders of his times and insight into their actions In 1889 he was appointed U S Minister to France by Harrison and in 1892 he had the dubious honor of being chosen as Harrison s running mate on the losing presidential ticket An influential friend and supporter of President McKinley and an occasional advisor to him Reid was no stranger to politics and to international diplomacy when McKinley appointed him to the Peace Commission that wrote the treaty concluding the Spanish American War As a matter of fact Reid s opinion reflected the administration s attitude of expansionism the policy of Manifest Destiny or imperialism as it was later called Reid s diary records the details of the sessions of the Joint Peace Commission of Paris from September through a large part of December of 1898 His day by day entries reveal the complexity of issues to be considered the tactics of both the Spanish and the American Commissions in attempting to gain advantage for their respective governments the interplay of the personalities of the once proud Spaniards and the brash Americans the political objectives influencing the points of view of the various members and the maneuverings that brought about the final resolution of debated issues
