Neuropsychological Studies In Aphasia:

Neuropsychological studies in aphasia Aleksandr Romanovič Lurija, 1977 Neuropsychological Studies of Nonfocal Brain Damage Harry Whitaker, 2012-12-06 In summary considerable controversy and research have been generated from the automatic effortful distinction Hasher and Zacks 1979 initially stated that all manipulations e.g. practice individual differences such as age orienting instructions must produce null effects in order to satisfy the criteria that a process is automatic However Zacks et al 1984 have more recently noted that automatic processes may range in degree from relative insensitivity to task and subject variables e.g. frequency processing to those that are more vulnerable to disruptive effects e.g. temporal processing A review of the literature reveals that individuals are sensitive to frequency information even if manipulations alter the slope of the judgments Perhaps the application of dual task methodology to the measurement of capacity demands will be useful in classifying processes along an attentional continuum Moreover there has been a tendency to dichotomize automatic effortful processes rather than to characterize them as ranging from low to high attentional demands Recent evidence Maki Ostby 1987 suggests that attention may be important only in the initial early stages of processing frequency information Therefore a major difference that may emerge between automatic and effortful processing could be the degree of sustained attention required from individuals In the following section we review the findings obtained in the application of the automatic effortful framework to the elderly and neurological psychiatric populations
