Biography, French, the study of a person's life, from birth to death, usually written by a biographer. The word is derived from the Greek bios (life) and grapho (to write). The first biographies were written by ancient Greek and Roman historians. The modern biography is a more detailed and often more critical study of a person's life. It may include a person's childhood, education, career, and death. The biography is a popular form of literature, and many famous people have been the subject of biographies.

Architecture, the art or science of designing and constructing buildings. It involves the use of materials and techniques to create structures that are both functional and aesthetically pleasing. Architecture is a branch of the visual arts, and it is closely related to engineering and design. The word is derived from the Greek architektō (to build). The first architects were ancient Greek and Roman engineers. The modern architect is a more specialized professional, who is responsible for the design and construction of buildings. The architecture is a popular form of art, and many famous buildings have been the subject of architectural studies.
