revolution and the Black Death c 1300 and the Thirty Years War c 1600 Kypta et al redress a significant lack of published work regarding economic history methodology in the premodern period Case studies stem from the Holy Roman Empire one of the most important economic regions in premodern times and reconnect the German premodern economic history approach with the grand narratives that have been developed mainly for Western European regions Methodological approaches stemming from economics as well as from sociology and cultural studies show how multifaceted research in economic history can be and how it might accordingly offer us new insights into premodern economies Chapters 9 and 10 are available open access under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License via link.springer.com

Childhood and Child Labour in the British Industrial Revolution Jane Humphries, 2010-06-24 This is a unique account of working class childhood during the British industrial revolution first published in 2010 Using more than 600 autobiographies written by working men of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries Jane Humphries illuminates working class childhood in contexts untouched by conventional sources and facilitates estimates of age at starting work social mobility the extent of apprenticeship and the duration of schooling The classic era of industrialisation 1790 1850 apparently saw an upsurge in child labour While the memoirs implicate mechanisation and the division of labour in this increase they also show that fatherlessness and large subsets common in these turbulent high mortality and high fertility times often cast children as partners and supports for mothers struggling to hold families together The book offers unprecedented insights into child labour family life careers and schooling Its images of suffering stoicism and occasional childish pleasures put the humanity back into economic history and the trauma back into the industrial revolution
