Politics Of Southeast Asia's New Media:

The Politics of Southeast Asia's New Media William Atkins, 2002 Demonstrates that the challenge to authoritarian regimes anticipated by modern theorists as a result of the globalization of news and information is not materializing. Instead, state control is continuing in new subtler forms.

The Politics of Southeast Asia's New Media William Atkins, 2013-11-19 The past decade has seen a major structural shift in broadcasting in Southeast Asia with the development of digital satellite and cable broadcasting. This shift has impacted upon some of the most information sensitive governments in the world: Singapore, Malaysia, and until recently Indonesia. Atkins traces this development in five countries, showing that the challenge to authoritarian regimes anticipated by modern theorists as a result of the globalization of news and information is not materializing. Instead, a new commercial elite has arisen in Southeast Asia's own mini moguls who act as gatekeepers for state interests as partners to global media companies.

Media and Power in Southeast Asia Cherian George, Gayathri Venkiteswaran, 2019-08-31 This study of Southeast Asian media and politics explores issues of global relevance pertaining to journalism's relationship with political power. It argues that the development of free, independent, and plural media has been complicated by trends towards commercialisation, digital platforms, and identity-based politics. These forces interact with state power in complex ways, opening up political space and pluralising discourse but without necessarily producing structural change. The book has sections on the democratic transitions of Indonesia, Myanmar, and Malaysia; authoritarian resilience in Singapore; media ownership patterns in non-communist Southeast Asia; intolerance in Indonesia and Myanmar; and digital disruptions in Vietnam and Malaysia.

Anthropologica, 2003 Media Asia, 2003 Media International Australia, 2002 The Media and Political Change in Southeast Asia Jonathan Woodier, 2009-01-01 The book is in a comprehensive, readable format; the book is logically organised, rich in data and statistics regarding the issues that it covers, as well as accessibly written such that its points would not be lost on the average upper-level undergraduate student with some preparation in Asian studies and the social sciences. Jane M. Ferguson, South East Asia Research, a serious academic work that should be on the official reading list of every media studies course. Chris Roberts, Presenter, Sky News. Jonathan Woodier has written an excellent book on the politics of media control in Southeast Asia. He shows how political elites in the region are using major events such as the 1997 Asian Financial Crisis and the 2001 September 11 terror attacks, as well as innovations in media tools such as public relations and the internet, to control information flow to their citizens. This book is a must-read for anyone interested in an explanation why Southeast Asian models of authoritarianism are surviving. A brilliant analysis; it combines media theory with a critical discussion of contemporary developments in Asia. James Gomez, Keio University, Japan. True to the old Chinese adage: kill a chicken to scare a monkey; the few who once challenged Southeast Asia's ruling elites disappeared, and the majority were silent. Crude but effective. Modern times, however, demand a more sophisticated approach. Ruling elites now strip cultures naked and micro-manage people's minds. Their preferred tools of penetration and manipulation are a compliant media and a money hungry PR industry Jonathan Woodier's insights will ensure that you will never read a newspaper or watch TV news in quite the same way again Trevor Watson Professional Public Relations Pty Ltd Australia This is an engaging and informative analysis of the media landscape in South East Asia It uncovers the pervasive impact of the global media on the political process and raises important academic and policy issues in the process This book is timely and will be a must read for policymakers academics and students across communications media studies politics and democratization as well as for everyone with an interest in current day developments in South East Asia Joep Cornelissen Leeds University Business School UK Jonathan Woodier's latest work considers what impact the media has upon the democratization process in Southeast Asia Has the media had a liberalizing effect or become subject to elite control in Southeast Asia and if so why What role does the global media play in this process particularly given its conglomerization and commoditization By examining the communications media and its relationship to political change in Southeast Asia this fascinating study will endeavour to provide both a regional comparative analysis and a more balanced interpretation of the mass communication media in the wake of September 11 2001 The book also investigates the durability of authoritarian regimes and the enduring capacity of the media controlled state alongside the growing sophistication of political communications particularly the use of PR consultants The author provides an insider's view with unique insights into the practice of political communication and its development throughout the strategically important region of Southeast Asia with its large Moslem states as well as much further afield to countries such as China and post industrial Europe As such the book will be warmly welcomed by academics of politics international relations media communications and PR It will also appeal to researchers interested in political change the rise of the global media giants and the influence of authoritarian states such as China
