germ of which consists of ten letters published in the Morning Post during the month of January 1861 under the title of London Horrors is an attempt to beat the bounds of metropolitan dirt and misery As a special correspondent of a newspaper is not a parliamentary committee and I hardly felt inclined to produce a blue book this volume contains indications rather than proofs of metropolitan social degradation The proofs however unfortunately are not far off and for a million of people to live in London as they are now living and in the main are contented to live is a glaring national disgrace About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works of beauty consumption and business in Victorian and Edwardian London Illuminating national and cultural contingencies specific to London as a global metropolis it makes an important intervention by challenging the view of those who like their historical contemporaries perceive the 19th and early 20th centuries as devoid of beauty praxis let alone a commercial beauty culture Contrary to this perception The Business of Beauty reveals that Victorian and Edwardian women and men developed a number of tacit strategies to transform their looks including the purchase of new goods and services from a heterogeneous group of urban entrepreneurs hairdressers barbers perfumers wigmakers complexion specialists hair restorers manicurists and beauty culturists Mining trade journals census data periodical print and advice literature Jessica P Clark takes us on a journey through Victorian and Edwardian London s beauty businesses from the shady back parlors of Sarah Madame Rachel Levenson to the elegant showrooms of Eugène Rimmel into the first Mayfair salon of Mrs Helena Titus aka Helena Rubinstein By revealing these stories Jessica P Clark revises traditional chronologies of British beauty consumption and provides the historical background to 20th century developments led by Rubinstein and others Weaving together histories of gender fashion and business to investigate the ways that Victorian critiques of self fashioning and beautification defined both the buying and selling of beauty goods this is a revealing resource for scholars students fashion followers and beauty enthusiasts alike

The Eternal Slum Anthony S. Wohl, 2001-03-01 The problem of how where and on what terms to house the urban masses in an industrial society remains unresolved to this day In nineteenth century Victorian England overcrowding was the most obvious characteristic of urban housing and despite constant agitation it remained widespread and persistent in London and other great cities such as Manchester Glasgow and Liverpool well into the twentieth century The Eternal Slum is the first full length examination of working class housing issues in a British town The city investigated not only provided the context for the development of a national policy but also in scale and variety of response stood in the vanguard of housing reform The failure of traditional methods of social amelioration in mid century the mounting storm of public protest the efforts of individual philanthropists and then the gradual formulation and application of new remedies constituted a major theme the need for municipal enterprise and state intervention Meanwhile the concept of overcrowding never precisely defined in law but based on middle class notions of decency and privacy slowly gave way to the positive idea of adequate living space with comfort as much as health or morals the criterion Not just dwellings but people were at issue There is little evidence in this period of the attitude of the worker himself to his housing Wohl has extensively researched local archives and in particular drawn on the vestry reports which have been relatively neglected Profusely illustrated with contemporary photographs and drawings this book is the definitive study of the housing reform movement in Victorian and Edwardian London and suggests what it was really like to live under such appalling conditions This important study will be of interest to social historians British historians urban planners and those interested in how social policies developed in previous eras

High Calvinists in Action Ian J. Shaw, 2003-02-06 This valuable contribution to the debate about the relation of religion to the modern city fills an important gap in the historiography of early nineteenth century religious life Although there is some evidence that strict doctrine led to a more restricted response to urban problems extensive local and personal variations mean that simple generalizations should be avoided Ian J Shaw argues against earlier prejudiced views and shows that high Calvinists played a vigorous and successful part in the response of early nineteenth century churches to the process of urbanization The study includes six substantial case studies of ministers and their churches in Manchester and London Four high Calvinist ministers are considered with two studies of ministers holding to an evangelical Calvinist doctrine also included to provide instructive contrasts Detailed social analysis of the congregations is based upon extensive use of manuscript and printed sources sermons and local and denominational press
