G. Wodehouse, 2012-03-01 Wodehouse does it again with Piccadilly Jim a novel that picks up the story of overbearing gold digger Nesta and her spoiled brat of a son Ogden In this caper tale a scheme is hatched to fake Ogden s kidnapping Will Nesta s nephew the roustabout Jimmy Crocker be able to pull off this nefarious plot Piccadilly Jim Pelham Grenville Wodehouse, 2022-10-27 This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it This work is in the public domain in the United States of America and possibly other nations Within the United States you may freely copy and distribute this work as no entity individual or corporate has a copyright on the body of the work Scholars believe and we concur that this work is important enough to be preserved reproduced and made generally available to the public We appreciate your support of the preservation process and thank you for being an important part of keeping this knowledge alive and relevant Piccadilly Jim P. G. Wodehouse, 2017-09-16 The novel features Ogden Ford and his mother Nesta both previously encountered in The Little Nugget 1913 Nesta has remarried to the hen pecked baseball loving millionaire Mr Peter Pett and Ogden remains spoilt and obnoxious The story takes its title from the charismatic character of Jimmy Crocker Nesta s nephew and a reforming playboy Piccadilly Jim Sir Pelham Grenville Wodehouse, 1930-01-01 The residence of Mr Peter Pett the well known financier on Riverside Drive is one of the leading eyesores of that breezy and expensive boulevard As you pass by in your limousine or while enjoying ten cents worth of fresh air on top of a green omnibus it jumps out and bites at you Architects confronted with it reel and throw up their hands defensively and even the lay observer has a sense of shock The place resembles in almost equal proportions a cathedral a suburban villa a hotel and a Chinese pagoda Many of its windows are of stained glass and above the porch stand two terra cotta lions considerably more repulsive even than the complacent animals which guard New York s Public Library It is a house which is impossible to overlook and it was probably for this reason that Mrs Pett insisted on her husband buying it for she was a woman who liked to be noticed Through the rich interior of this mansion Mr Pett its nominal proprietor was wandering like a lost spirit The hour was about ten of a fine Sunday morning but the Sabbath calm which was upon the house had not communicated itself to him There was a look of exasperation on his usually patient face and a muttered oath picked up no doubt on the godless Stock Exchange escaped his lips Darn it He was afflicted by a sense of the pathos of his position It was not as if he demanded much from life He asked but little here below At that moment all that he wanted was a quiet spot where he might read his Sunday paper in solitary peace and he could not find one Intruders lurked behind every door The place was congested This sort of thing had been growing worse and worse ever since his marriage two years previously There was a strong literary virus in Mrs Pett s system She not only wrote voluminously herself the name Nesta Ford Pett is familiar to all lovers of sensational fiction but aimed at maintaining a salon Starting in pursuance of this aim with a single specimen her nephew Willie Partridge who was working on a new explosive which would eventually revolutionise war she had gradually added to her collections until now she gave shelter beneath her terra cotta roof to no fewer than six young and unrecognised geniuses Six brilliant youths mostly novelists who had not yet started and poets who were about to begin cluttered up Mr Pett s rooms on this fair June morning while he clutching his Sunday paper wandered about finding like the dove in Genesis no rest It was at such times that he was almost inclined to envy his wife s first husband a business friend of his named Elmer Ford who had perished suddenly of an apoplectic seizure and the pity which he generally felt for the deceased tended to shift its focus Marriage had certainly complicated life for Mr Pett as it frequently does for the man who waits fifty years before trying it In addition to the geniuses Mrs Pett had brought with her to her new home her only son Ogden a fourteen year old boy of a singularly unloveable type Years of grown up society and the absence of anything approaching discipline had given him a precocity on which the earnest efforts of a series of private tutors had expended themselves in vain They came full of optimism and self confidence to retire after a brief interval shattered by the boy s stodgy resistance to education in any form or shape To Mr Pett never at his ease with boys Ogden Ford was a constant irritant He disliked his stepson s personality and he more than suspected him of stealing his cigarettes It was an additional annoyance that he was fully aware of the impossibility of ever catching him at it Piccadilly Jim Pelham Grenville
