Modeling Reality Iwo Bialynicki-Birula, Iwona Bialynicka-Birula, 2004-10-21 This text covers a wide range of subjects accessible to anyone who wants to learn about the use of computer modeling to solve a diverse range of problems but who doesn't possess a specialized training in mathematics or computer science      Modeling Reality with Mathematics Alfio Quarteroni, 2022-12-15 Simulating the behavior of a human heart predicting tomorrow's weather optimizing the aerodynamics of a sailboat finding the ideal cooking time for a hamburger to solve these problems cardiologists meteorologists sportsmen and engineers can count on math help This book will lead you to the discovery of a magical world made up of equations in which a huge variety of important problems for our life can find useful answers      Modeling from Reality Katsushi Ikeuchi, Yoichi Sato, 2002 This book summarizes the results of the editors modeling from reality MFR project which took place over the last decade The goal of this project was to develop techniques for modeling real objects and or environments into geometric and photometric models through computer vision techniques By developing such techniques time consuming modeling process currently undertaken by human programmers can be semi automatically performed and as a result one can drastically shorten the developing time of such virtual reality systems reduce their developing cost and widen their application areas The project was conducted while the authors were at the Computer Science Department of Carnegie Mellon University CMU and the Institute of Industrial Science at the University of Tokyo Modeling from Reality is suitable for a secondary text in a graduate level course and as a reference for researchers and practitioners in industry

Shum,1996 Abstract Traditional virtual reality systems rely on manual construction of the virtual environment which is labor intensive and usually not very realistic This thesis describes a modeling from reality system which observes from multiple viewpoints analyzes the geometrical shape of a scene or an object and subsequently integrates the multiple views to build a complete scene or object model from the existing environment Our system produces statistically optimal object models by adopting a new approach to modeling from reality an integral approach to object modeling The integral approach consists of two parts how to integrate and what to integrate Using a polyhedral object as an example this thesis show how to integrate multiple views in a statistically optimal fashion It is illustrated that multiple view integration can be formulated as a problem of principal component analysis with missing data PCAMD In spite of the noisy input and missing data at each view the PCAMD algorithm makes use of input redundancy among different views and guarantees that the recovered object model is statistically optimal It is shown that the problem of PCAMD can be generalized as a weighted least squares problem which is solved using an efficient bilinear iterative algorithm Matching multiple views of a polyhedral object can be accomplished by tracking its planar surface patches It is however difficult to match multiple views of a free form i e smooth object This thesis shows what to be integrated from multiple views of a free form object by employing a novel global resampling technique A semi regularly tessellated spherical mesh is used to uniformly resample the free form object This mesh representation provides a one to one mapping between a resampled convex concave mesh to its curvature distribution on a unit sphere The correspondence between two meshes can then be established by minimizing the difference between two curvature distributions The same mesh representation also enables one to compare 3D shapes and to synthesize new shapes In summary this thesis shows that PCAMD can be used to integrate multiple views to obtain a statistically optimal object model provided that those views can be resampled and matched under appropriate representations Based on the integral approach our modeling from reality system has been successfully applied for modeling both polyhedral and free form objects
