Historiography in Saudi Arabia Jörg Matthias

Determann, 2013-10-25 Saudi Arabia is generally and justifiably viewed as a country with the fewest democratic institutions and the weakest traditions of pluralism in the world It is therefore surprising to learn that at least in one corner of the Saudi world there is a plurality of voices Jörg Matthias Determann brings this element to light by analysing an important field of cultural activity in Saudi Arabia historical writing By exploring the emergence of a plurality of historical narratives in the absence of formal political pluralism Determann seeks to paint a more nuanced picture of Saudi Arabia than has previously been drawn Since the 1920s local tribal Shi'i and dynastic histories have contributed to a growing plurality of narratives diverging from and contesting the histories which focus on the royal family Instead they have emphasized the communities' historical independence from the House of Saud or asserting the communities' importance in Saudi national history In addition to this during the 1970s distinct social and economic histories began to be developed new narratives which have described important historical events evolving from wider social and economic factors rather than resulting from the actions of individual rulers or communities Paradoxically this happened because of the expansion of the Saudi state including state provision of mass education A variety of previously illiterate and relatively poor sections of Saudi society including former Bedouin were thus empowered to produce histories which while conformist for the most part also provided a vehicle for dissenting voices Furthermore Determann argues that this proliferation of alternative histories is also due to globalizing processes such as the spread of the internet It is through this phenomenon that narrative plurality has been facilitated by putting Saudi historians in contact with different ideologies methodologies and source material from abroad In challenging the widely held perception of Saudi Arabia as an irredeemably closed and monolithic society Historiography in Saudi Arabia
