Modern Arabic Poetry Arthur John Arberry, 1967 Treasures of Modern Arabic Poetry Hassane Yarti, 2025-09-07

Poetry has always been the heartbeat of Arabic culture a mirror of its history and a vessel of its memory While deeply rooted in tradition but with its capacity for abstract expression and linguistic precision has long transcended its own boundaries to leave an indelible mark on global aesthetics It has become the carrier of centuries weight yet it renews itself in every generation reshaping its voice to speak to the anxieties and hopes of the present This anthology Treasures of Modern Arabic Poetry opens as a living garden of voices where every poem breathes with its own fragrance and vitality Here From ocean's edge to desert gulf poets converge in these pages carrying with them the breadth of the Arab world's spirit stand side by side Each one writes from the soil of their own life marked by memory history and place yet together they weave a fabric that transcends borders Their poems are intimate and universal at once a father's tenderness a lover's yearning a cry for justice a prayer whispered in silence or a dance with life itself To translate these voices into English is more than an act of linguistic crossing It is an invitation to enter the pulse of another world to hear the music of Arabic verse as it moves between tradition and innovation Some poems sing in images as delicate as a butterfly's wing others speak with the raw force of wounds that refuse to be silenced Together they affirm that poetry remains the purest language of human dignity and resilience In the reader's hands lies an anthology at once a bridge and a passage between cultures and sensibilities For though the poets differ in geography and generation they share the same impulse to turn life in all its beauty and pain into words that endure May this book be read not as distant literature but as a mirror in which every reader may glimpse something of their own longing their own struggle their own light Hassane Yarti Barcelona 05 September 2025 When the Words Burn John
