Arte Povera (Italian: "poor art") was a movement in Italy and abroad that began working since 1967. The name "Arte Povera" was coined by German artist Joseph Kosuth. The artists used natural materials, including earth, vegetables, and human bodies. Their work was a reaction to the art world, in which he explained that their work was "poor" in the sense that it was composed of materials (especially natural and social resources), and around the central idea of "making something out of nothing".

The early Arte Povera works were characterized by unexpected juxtapositions of objects or images, by the use of contrasting materials, and by the fusion of past and present, nature and culture, and life and death. Arte Povera was the Italian response to the general spirit of the times, as artists were pushing back the boundaries of art, expanding the use of materials and questioning the nature and definition of art itself as well as its role in society. They characterized of these movements with other positions of the period, such as Fluxus, Performance, and Conceptual art.

Hegel on the Modern Arts Benjamin Rutter, 2010-07-29 Debates over the end of art have tended to obscure Hegel's work on the arts themselves Benjamin Rutter opens this study with a defence of art's indispensability to Hegel's conception of modernity he then seeks to reorient discussion toward the distinctive values of painting poetry and the novel Working carefully through Hegel's four lecture series on aesthetics he identifies the expressive possibilities particular to each medium Thus Dutch genre scenes animate the everyday with an appearance of vitality metaphor frees language from prose and Goethe's lyrics revive the banal

Illuminated Paris S. Hollis Clayson, 2019-05-16 The City of Light For many these four words instantly conjure late nineteenth century Paris and the garish colors of Toulouse Lautrec's iconic posters More recently the Eiffel Tower's nightly show of sparkling electric lights has come to exemplify our fantasies of Parisian nightlife Though we reflect longingly on such scenes in Illuminated Paris Hollis Clayson shows that there's more to these clichés than meets the eye In this richly illustrated book she traces the dramatic evolution of lighting in Paris and how artists responded to the shifting visual and cultural scenes that resulted from these technologies While older gas lighting produced a haze of orange new electric lighting was hardly an improvement the glare of experimental arc lights themselves dangerous left figures looking pale and ghoulish As Clayson shows artists representations of these new colors and shapes reveal turn of the century concerns about modernization as electric lighting came to represent the harsh glare of rapidly accelerating social change At the same time in part thanks to American artists visiting the city these works of art also produced our enduring romantic view of Parisian glamour and its Belle époque

The Music of Dada Peter Dayan, 2018-08-06 100 years after the Dada soirées rocked the art world the author investigates the role that music played in the movement Dada is generally thought of as noisy and unmusical but The Music of Dada shows that music was at the core of Dada theory and practice Music by Schoenberg Satie and many others performed on the piano played a central role in the soirées from the beginnings in Zurich in 1916 to the end in Paris and Holland seven years later

The Music of Dada provides a historical analysis of music at Dada events and asks why accounts of Dada have so consistently ignored music's vital presence. The answer to that question turns out to explain how music has related to the other arts ever since the days of Dada. The music of Dada is the key to understanding intermediality in our time.

Meaning of Modern Art Karsten Harries, 1979-12 That modern art is different from earlier art is so obvious as to be hardly worth mentioning. Yet there is little agreement as to the meaning or the importance of this difference. Indeed, contemporary aestheticians especially seem to feel that modern art does not depart in any essential way from the art of the past. One reason for this view is that, with the exception of Marxism, the leading philosophical schools today are ahistorical in orientation. This is as true of phenomenology and existentialism as it is of contemporary analytic philosophy. As a result, there have been few attempts by philosophers to understand the meaning of the history of art, an understanding fundamental to any grasp of the difference between modern art and its predecessors. Art expresses an ideal image of man and an essential part of understanding the meaning of a work of art is understanding this image. When the ideal image changes, art too must change. It is thus possible to look at the emergence of modern art as a function of the disintegration of the Platonic-Christian conception of man. The artist no longer has an obvious, generally accepted route to follow. One sign of this is that there is no one style today comparable to Romanesque, Gothic, Renaissance, or Baroque. This lack of direction has given the artist a new freedom. Today there is a great variety of answers to the question: What is art? Such variety, however, betrays an uncertainty about the meaning of art. An uneasiness about the meaning of art has led modern artists to enter into dialogue with art historians, psychologists, and philosophers. Perhaps this interpretation can contribute to that dialogue.

How New York Stole the Idea of Modern Art Serge Guilbaut, 2020-09-15 A provocative interpretation of the political and cultural history of the early cold war years. By insisting that art, even art of the avant garde, is part of the general culture, not autonomous or above it, he forces us to think differently, not only about art and art history but about society itself. The Professionalization of Window Display in Britain, 1919-1939 Kerry Meakin, 2024-09-05 This book provides the first comprehensive history of window display as a practice and profession in Britain during the dynamic period of 1919 to 1939. In recent decades, the disciplines of retail history, business history, design, and cultural history have contributed to the study of department stores and other types of shops. However, these studies have only made passing references to window display and its role in retail society and culture. Kerry Meakin investigates the conditions that enabled window display to become a professional practice during the interwar period, exploring the shift in display styles, developments within education and training, and the international influence on methods and techniques. Piecing together the evidence, visual and written, about people, events, organisations exhibitions and debates Meakin provides a critical examination of this vital period of design history highlighting major display designers and artists The book reveals the modernist aesthetic developments that influenced high street displays and how they introduced passers by to modern art movements Modern Art and the Idea of the Mediterranean Vojtech Jirat-Wasiuty?ski, Anne Elizabeth Dymond, Vojt?ch Jirat-Wasiuty?ski, 2007-01-01 The Mediterranean is an invented cultural space on the frontier between North and South West and East Modern Art and the Idea of the Mediterranean examines the representation of this region in the visual arts since the late eighteenth century placing the idea of the Mediterranean a cultural construct rather than a physical reality at the centre of our understanding of modern visual culture This collection of essays features an international group of scholars who examine competing visions of the Mediterranean in terms of modernity and cultural identity questioning and illuminating both European and non European representations An introductory essay frames the analysis in terms of a new spatial paradigm of the Mediterranean as a geographic historical and cultural region that emerged in the late eighteenth century as France and Britain colonized the surrounding territories Essays are grouped around three vital themes visualization of the space of the new Mediterranean varied uses of the classical paradigm and issues of identity and resistance in an age of modernity and colonialism Drawing on recent geographical historical cultural and anthropological studies contributors address the visual representation of identity in both the European and the Oriental the colonial and post colonial Mediterranean Descriptions of Education
