Men And Women Writers Of The 1930s Dangerous Flood Of History:

British Women Writers 1914-1945 Catherine Clay, 2017-09-20 Catherine Clay's persuasively argued and rigorously documented study examines women's friendships during the period between the two world wars. Building on extensive new archival research, the book's organizing principle is a series of literary historical case studies that explore the practices, meanings, and effects of friendship within a network of British women writers who were all loosely connected to the feminist weekly periodical Time and Tide. Clay considers the letters and diaries as well as fiction, poetry, autobiographies, and journalistic writings of authors such as Vera Brittain, Winifred Holtby, Storm Jameson, Naomi Mitchison, and Stella Benson to examine women's friendships in relation to two key contexts: the rise of the professional woman writer under the shadow of literary modernism and historic shifts in the cultural recognition of lesbianism crystallized by The Well of Loneliness trial in 1928. While Clay's study presents substantial evidence to support the crucial role close and enduring friendships played in women's professional achievements, it also boldly addresses the limitations and denials of these relationships. Producing biographies of friendship untold in existing author studies, her book also challenges dominant accounts of women's friendships and advances new ways for thinking about women's friendship in contemporary debates. Men and Women Writers of the 1930s Janet Montefiore, 2003-09-02 Men and Women Writers of the 1930s is a searching critique of the issues of memory and gender during this dynamic decade. Montefiore asks two principle questions: what part does memory play in the political literature of and about 1930s Britain? And what were the roles of women both as writers and as signifying objects in constructing that literature? Montefiore's topical analysis of 1930s mass unemployment, fascist uprising, and appeasement is shockingly relevant in society today. Issues of class, anti-fascist historical novels, post-war memoirs of Auden generation writers, and neglected women poets are discussed at length. Writers include George Orwell, Virginia Woolf, W. H. Auden, Storm Jameson, Jean Rhys, Rebecca West. Men and Women Writers of the 1930s Jan Montefiore, 1996 Men and Women Writers of the 1930s is a searching critique of the issues of memory and gender during this dynamic decade. chapters written by an international team of Orwell specialists address familiar topics such as Orwell's journalism, broadcasting, literary criticism and politics as well as less well trodden areas of his output such as his accounts of stupidity, kindness and justice and his connections with contemporaries like Jack Common, Katharine Burdekin, Wyndham Lewis and Victor Serge. Sections on Orwell's professional activities, his main literary influences, his politics, his intellectual fixations, his literary contemporaries and his legacies structure the book, which moves thematically and topically through the full scope of his output. The first section looks at how Orwell spent his time as a writer, reader and broadcaster. Chapters on writers from Shakespeare to the modernists investigate the determinants of Orwell's literary practice. The book then turns to a set of political contexts in which Orwell's writing can be understood. The Fixations section covers the familiar such as Orwell's account of Englishness and the unfamiliar such as his account of the absurd. The fifth section relates Orwell to several politically minded contemporaries, tracing connections and differences between their writing. The final section of the Handbook reflects on how Orwell sounds through several literary and socio-political legacies and includes innovative considerations of feminism, Afrofuturism and queer speculative fiction.

The Cambridge History of Twentieth-Century English Literature Laura Marcus, Peter Nicholls, 2004. Publisher Description: English Fiction in the 1930s Chris Hopkins, 2006-01-01. This study approaches the fiction of the 1930s through critical debates about genre, language and history, setting these in their original context and discussing the generic forms most favoured by novelists at the time. Chris Hopkins uses a series of case studies of texts to draw on, develop or explore the boundaries, contemporary usefulness and complexities of particular prose genres. Generic debates and the political/aesthetic effects of different kinds of representation were live issues as discursive struggles and negotiations took place between modernist and realist modes, between high middle and lowbrow categorisations of culture, between literature and mass culture and between different conceptions of the role of the writer, politics and nationality, sexuality and gender identities. Chris Hopkins draws both on well-known texts and on novels which have only recently begun to be discussed by critics of the thirties, particularly those by women writers whose work has still not been related very clearly to the literary and political debates of the period. Organised in five sections, each focusing on major genres, he takes a wide range of novels as case studies and discusses their uses of generic forms, relating them to other examples and to their historical, political and cultural contexts.

American Writers and World War I David A. Rennie, 2020-07-31. Looking at texts written throughout the careers of Edith Wharton, Ellen La Motte, Mary Borden, Thomas Boyd, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Laurence Stallings and Ernest Hemingway, American Writers and World War I argues that authors' war writing continuously evolved in response to developments in their professional and personal lives. Recent research has focused on constituencies of identity such as gender, race and politics registered in American Great War writing. Rather than being dominated by their perceived membership of such socio-political categories, this study argues that writers reacted to and represented the war in complex ways which were frequently linked to the exigencies of maintaining a career as a professional author War writing was implicated in and influenced by wider cultural forces such as governmental censorship the publishing business advertising and the Hollywood film industry American Writers and World War I argues that even authors hallmark anti war works are in fact characterized by an awareness of the war s nuanced effects on society and individuals By tracking authors war writing throughout their entire careers in well known texts autobiography correspondence and neglected works this study contends that writers reactions were multifaceted and subject to change in response to their developments as writers and individuals This work also uncovers the hitherto unexplored importance of American cultural and literary precedents which offered writers means of assessing the war Ultimately the volume argues American World War I writing was highly personal complex and idiosyncratic
