place in Syria during this formative period of Islamic life were not simply a matter of the replacement of one civilization by another as a result of military conquest but rather of shifting relationships and practices in a multifaceted social and cultural setting. Even as late antique forms of religion and culture persisted, the formation of Islamic identity was affected by the people who constructed, lived in, and narrated the history of their city. Khalek draws on the evidence of architecture and the testimony of pilgrims, biographers, geographers, and historians to shed light on this process of identity formation. Offering a fresh approach to the early Islamic period, she moves the study of Islamic origins beyond a focus on issues of authenticity and textual criticism and initiates an interdisciplinary discourse on narrative storytelling and the interpretations of material culture.
