Nurses Counselling The View From The Practitioners:

Nurses Counselling Philip Burnard, Ian Hulatt, 1996 How is counselling in nursing actually done There are many excellent texts on the theory and practice of counselling but this is the first nursing book to explore in detail what happens during the process The text starts with a discussion about the range and breadth of counselling in nursing This is an important chapter and presents a critical evaluation of the problems of counselling practice and of doing research Experienced practitioners have then contributed chapters on counselling in different situations They have written about their own approaches covering both the theory and how actual case examples evolved Pitfalls and problems are highlighted Between them they encompass a range of situations including counselling in crises bereavement counselling of children genetic counselling and racism The overriding message in the book is that there is no single appropriate way in which to counsel people Rather each individual brings something unique to each encounter drawing inspiration and knowledge from many sources The skill lies in finding some way to communicate effectively for each occasion

Children's and Young People's Nursing in Practice Valerie Coleman, Lynda Smith, Maureen Bradshaw, 2006-09-28 This innovative textbook uses a problem based learning PBL approach to cover content that is most common to child branch nursing courses The evidence based PBL triggers are grounded in the reality of everyday contemporary nursing practice and readers are engaged in an active learning process in order to develop key skills for clinical practice and life long learning The book features individual chapters focusing on the different care environments that student nurses experience when caring for children young people and families within health and social care It is not necessary for readers to be undertaking a PBL structured course in order to use and benefit from this text
