Food and nutrition security in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia during COVID-19 pandemic: May 2020 report Hirvonen, Kalle, Abate, Gashaw T., de Brauw, Alan, 2020-05-14 We called by telephone a representative sample of 600 households in Addis Ababa Ethiopia to assess household food and nutrition security status during the COVID 19 pandemic More than half the households indicated that their incomes were lower than expected and more than one third reported that they are extremely stressed about the situation Using a pre pandemic wealth index we find that less wealthy households were considerably more likely to report income losses and high stress levels than were wealthier households Compared to a period just before the pandemic January and February 2020 indicators measuring food security have significantly worsened In April households were less frequently consuming relatively more expensive but nutritionally richer foods such as fruit and dairy products. However, overall food security status in Addis Ababa is not yet alarming, possibly because most households have used their savings to buffer food consumption. It is likely that these savings will not last for much longer, calling for a rapid scale up of existing support programs.

Nutrition and Economic Development in the Eighteenth-Century Habsburg Monarchy John Komlos, 2014-07-14 John Komlos examines the industrial expansion of Austria from a fresh viewpoint and develops a new model for the industrial revolution. By integrating recent advances in the study of human biology and nutrition as they relate to physical stature, population growth, and levels of economic development, he reveals an intense Malthusian crisis in the Habsburg lands during the second half of the eighteenth century. At that time, food shortages brought about by the accelerated population growth of the 1730s forced the government to adopt a reform program that opened the way for the beginning of the industrial revolution in Austria and in the Czech Crownlands. Comparing this Austrian model of economic growth to the industrial revolution in Britain, Komlos argues that the model is general enough to explain demographic and economic growth elsewhere in Europe despite obvious regional differences. The main feature of the model is the interplay between a persistent, even if small, tendency to accumulate capital and a population with an underlying tendency to grow in numbers while remaining subject to Malthusian checks, particularly a limited availability of food. According to Komlos, modern economic growth in Europe began when the food constraint was finally lifted.
