Nutrition of Women* G. H. Bourne,1987-10 Gender, Nutrition, and the Human Right to Adequate Food Anne C. Bellows,Flavio L.S. Valente,Stefanie Lemke,María Daniela Núñez Burbano de Lara,2015-12-07 This book introduces the human right to adequate food and nutrition as evolving concept and identifies two structural disconnects fueling food insecurity for a billion people and disproportionately affecting women children and rural food producers the separation of women s rights from their right to adequate food and nutrition and the fragmented attention to food as commodity and the medicalization of nutritional health Three conditions arising from these disconnects are discussed structural violence and discrimination frustrating the realization of women s human rights as well as their private and public contributions to food and nutrition security for all many women s experience of their and their children s simultaneously independent and intertwined subjectivities during pregnancy and breastfeeding being poorly understood in human rights law and abused by poorly regulated food and nutrition industry marketing practices and the neoliberal economic system s interference both with the autonomy and self determination of women and their communities and with the strengthening of sustainable diets based on democratically governed local food systems The book calls for a social movement led reconceptualization of the right to adequate food toward incorporating gender women s rights and nutrition based on the food sovereignty framework The Politics of Motherhood Jane Lewis,2024-05-01 During the early twentieth century maternal and child welfare became a national issue for the first time The child and maternal welfare movement had a significant material and ideological effect on women and it is therefore important to understand the mechanisms which structured and controlled it Originally published in 1980 The Politics of Motherhood asks why child and maternal welfare policy took the particular form that it did during the Edwardian and inter war years and in doing so brings together a number of important themes relating to women and social policy By taking into account not only the professionals involved but also the mothers themselves their reactions to the policies implemented and their own demands for change the study brings to the forefront such themes as the relation between health and the family economy the control of health care and the control of reproduction Many issues arising from these themes were of present day interest at the time and still are today such as the medicalisation of childbirth which has involved a loss of control by women over its management This study illustrates the importance of stopping to examine the pedigree of our social policies and the need to ask whether a policy developed under one specific set of social economic and political conditions can continue to be relevant in a markedly different situation Nutritional Foundations and Clinical Applications - E-Book Michele Grodner,Sara Long Roth,Bonnie C.
