Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, 2010 Southern Medical Journal ,1922 Nutrition and economic development Ecker, Olivier, Al-Riffai, Perrihan, Breisinger, Clemens, El-Batrawy, Rawia, 2016-11-15 This book's main hypothesis is that Egypt's large food subsidy system has been ineffective in reducing undernutrition in fact it may have contributed to sustaining and even aggravating both nutrition challenges For a long time the subsidy system provided only calorie rich foods at very low and constant prices and with quotas much above dietary recommendations This system has created incentives to consume calorie overladen and unbalanced diets increasing the risks of child and maternal overnutrition and at high subsidy levels the risk of inadequate child nutrition Moreover the large public budget allocated to the food subsidies is unavailable for possibly more nutrition beneficial spending such as for child and maternal nutrition specific interventions The authors findings consistently suggest that in addition to the well known economic rationale for reforming the Egyptian food subsidy system there are strong reasons to reform food subsidies due to nutrition and public health concerns A fundamental food subsidy reform process has been under way since June 2014 The already implemented changes can be expected to have reduced some incentives for overconsumption and may have positive dietary effects However further major reform efforts are needed to transform the current subsidy system into a key policy instrument in the fight against malnutrition The findings of this book should be valuable to policy makers analysts development partners and others concerned with improving food security and promoting healthy nutrition in Egypt and other developing countries with large social protection programs Global Landscape of Nutrition Challenges in Infants and Children K.F. Grubb Jr., 2006-06-29 This is the first book to summarize the methods conceptual issues and results of studies using the interpretation of feather growth rates as an index of nutritional condition in birds The author has coined the term ptilochronology literally the study of feather time to describe this technique which relies on the fact that as a feather grows it produces visible growth bars Both the technique and its conceptual foundations have been applied worldwide to numerous
