Mroczka, 2023-01-20 Lessons Learned from Our Travels Travel broadens our minds but until we leave our safe home space and have seen how other people live we really can't grasp that concept Until one ventures out into the world all we really know is our own existence We really have no idea how others around the world survive what they're experiencing or the conditions others are facing to meet their needs When one witnesses firsthand the extreme poverty in many parts of the world it is truly an eye opener Some people are forced to sell their children in order to buy food to survive Many cultures still persecute people and prevent them from many of the accepted freedoms we have here in America Wars are being fought in many parts of the world with people barely surviving We are so blessed in this country to have the freedoms that we have but are often taken for granted Travel allows us to really see the world as it is today and how we should never take anything for granted again Having traveled to most parts of the world we've found that people are all basically the same No matter what our ethnicity race religion gender or culture we all need the same basic things Shelter food and clothing are most necessary to provide comfort in our lives They may look different taste different or be different but they still serve the same purposes for all of us After those basic needs are met most humans want good jobs to provide a decent living for themselves and their families People all over the world want their children to succeed and be happy Peace health safety education security and acceptance are also desired by mostly everyone no matter where they live in the world My grandma and parents always taught me the golden rule to treat others the way I would want to be treated I have found that when I applied that simple rule it was a great way to get along with people in any part of the world Greeting people with a kind smile sharing thoughtful words and showing an interest in another person s culture are simple things to do but accomplish much If people would just realize that we re all very much alike embrace the few differences we have and show respect for one another then possibly our world could truly experience peace on earth

Homeward Journey Leslie Foor,2003-11 Homeward Journey depicts a young writer s life through the art of his poetry My brother Leslie was confronted with many obstacles as he traveled through a short lifetime He never lost sight of his dream as a child to become a writer This collection will take you on the journey of his life in the early days through happy and sad times and later periods during his fight with Huntington s Disease As his physical capabilities became more difficult he felt free spiritually and expressed himself through poetry When his handwriting became illegible he still continued to scribble down his thoughts Never did he give up hope He had full knowledge of his destiny and independently met each day as a challenge Throughout my life he encouraged me and because of him I accomplished more than I thought possible In preparation for this book I have read these poems over and over and I am in awe of how I continue to be inspired Without a doubt as you read through these pages you will find poems that fill you heart with joy fond memories and hope Joan Foor Huntington s Disease is a hereditary disorder that affects the brain cells causing uncontrolled body movements lack of coordination loss of ability to think and reason as well as psychological difficulties There are approximately 30 000 people in the United States who are affected by HD and another 200 000 who are at risk of developing the disease HD generally strikes in mid life between the ages of 30 50 but cases as young as 2 years and as old as 80 have been reported In 1993 the gene that causes HD was identified and a simple predictive test was developed to determine whether a person carries the defective gene or not Those who do carry the gene will develop the disease if they live long enough and they CAN pass it onto each of their children Those who do not inherit the gene cannot pass HD onto any of their children HD does not skip generations There is currently no effective treatment
