Osterman's War James J. Cullen, 2000-12 In February of 1945 the Third Reich is in its death throes The ideological madness that spawned murder and genocide has run its course But one massive shudder is left in the dying beast and ten thousand American and British airmen held captive at Stalag Luft III by their Luftwaffe counterparts are caught up in the cataclysmic event Hitler has ordered their execution S General Ernst Dietrich commander of the SS division responsible for the personal safety of the Fuhrer is given the assignment He in turn directs one of his field commanders General von Hacker to carry out the job Forewarned Camp Commandant Hauptman Kettenbach is appalled by the SS order He splits his charges into two groups and sends the smaller one a decoy group of two thousand to the prearranged railhead at the town of Spremberg In command is his aide Unteroffizier Kurt Osterman The ruse works allowing the remaining eight thousand POWs to be evacuated undetected out of the area Colonel Jackson the senior American officer of the decoy group is told by Osterman of the Spremberg destination and that it is the initial evacuation point from the Russian advance however he is not told of the SS threat nor of his captor's duplicity Jackson's second in command Lieutenant Colonel Benton rugged and obsessively anti German advocates a violent takeover from Osterman and a dash to the Russian lines just 70 kilometers away Jackson puts the suggestion on hold and is supported by the ranking British officer Major Boyle a tank battalion commander and the only ground pounder in camp As the 150 kilometer march to Spremberg begins in below freezing weather the drama unfolds revealing Osterman's vendetta as well as his plan to combat the SS column of executioners Ultimately a strange alliance between the prisoners and their German captors is struck and the battle with the SS begins and ends with Osterman and Dietrich in mortal combat
