Canadian Contingent for Special Service in the Field in South Africa Canada Department of Militia and Defence,1899 Painting the Map Red Carman Miller,1993-02-01 Painting the Map Red is based on extensive research into public and private papers from printed and manuscript sources in both Canada and Britain Carman Miller attempts to explain why men volunteered for service in this distant conflict despite the rancorous pre war debate on the wisdom of Canadian participation He examines the difficulties of leading citizen soldiers and compares the differing styles of leadership He also reveals how the soldiers experiences in the field and the public s perceptions of the war altered Canadian opinion politics and military development Canada's Soldiers in South Africa John Boileau,2011-05-18 In 1899 a thousand Canadian soldiers went to war in South Africa They were fighting white farmers who defied the mighty British empire by setting up their own independent state This South African or Boer War of 1899 1902 marked the first time Canadian troops went abroad to fight alongside Britain Like other conflicts the Boer War was controversial in Canada Sir Wilfrid Laurier s liberal government reluctantly responded to sentiment in much of English Canada and eventually sent nearly 8 400 Canadians to serve in South Africa More than 200 died there Canada s Soldiers in South Africa recounts fascinating stories about the experiences of young Canadians fighting in this little known conflict
