Pulverized Coal Burning:

Pulverized Coal Combustion Stanley Singer, 1984 Preparation, Transportation, and Combustion of Powdered Coal John Blizard, 1923 Fundamentals of the Physical-Chemistry of Pulverized Coal Combustion L. Lahaye, G. Prado, 1987-08-31

The study of coal for the production of energy is certainly not a new area of research. Many research works were carried out to improve the efficiency of industrial and domestic facilities. In the sixties however because of the availability and low cost of petroleum coal consumption decreased and the research effort in this area was minimum. Meanwhile the situation has totally changed. Considering the reserves of oil and the instability of regions where they are located it is becoming absolutely necessary to develop other sources of energy. The major alternative to oil appears to be coal at least for the near future. Indeed the reserves known today represent several centuries of energy consumption. It is therefore becoming urgent to develop efficient and non polluting technologies to produce energy from coal. The main possibilities are liquefaction, gasification, directed combustion. Research and development efforts on liquefaction have been considerably reduced because of high cost of technologies involved and poor prospects for the next two decades. Research works on gasification are progressing; it is a promising approach. However direct combustion either in pulverized coal furnaces or in fluidized beds is the more promising way of expanding rapidly the utilization of coal. These techniques are already used in some facilities but many environmental problems remain slowing down their development.

Powdered Coal as a Fuel Cecil Frederic Herington, 1920 Pulverized Coal Combustion and Gasification. (Stichworte Teil 3) L. D. Smoot, T. D. Pratt, 1979

viii and approaches could be adapted to other coal conversion and combustion problems we have not considered combustion or gasification in fluidized or fixed beds or in situ processes. In addition we have not considered other fossil fuel combustion problems associated with oil shale, tar sands etc even though many aspects of pulverized coal combustion would relate to these problems. For the case of pulverized coal models we have attempted to provide a detailed description of the model foundations. Parts I and II of this book emphasize general principles for describing reacting turbulent or laminar multiphase systems. General conservation equations are developed and summarized. The basis for computing thermochemical equilibrium in complex heterogeneous mixtures is presented together with techniques for rapid computation and reference to required input data. Rate processes are then discussed including pertinent aspects of turbulence, chemical kinetics, radiative heat transfer and gas particle convective diffusive interactions. Much of Part II deals with parameters and coefficients for describing these complex rate processes. This part of the book provides recommended values of coefficients and parameters for treating complex reacting flows. Parts I and II may well be suitable for use in an advanced course in reacting flows and have been written partly with that in mind. Part III deals with more specific aspects of pulverized coal characteristics and rate processes. Following a general description of coal structure and constitution coal pyrolysis and char oxidation processes are considered. The
