Children's Human Rights and Public Schooling in the United States Julia Hall, 2013-02-11 Promotion Text for Children's Human Rights and Public Schooling in the United States Julia Hall The United States tends to portray itself as a human rights leader However human rights concerns are confronted everyday by people in this democracy including children The purpose of this volume is to bring attention to the fact that against the backdrop of neoliberal expansion serious human rights violations are taking place among children everywhere including in the US The daily struggles among groups of school children in the US are specifically considered here such as children who are sorted by race homeless children transient children child refugees children as targeted by human traffickers and or child migrant workers As the economy continues to constrict more and more young people find themselves struggling to grow up on these razor thin margins of survival Given current economic arrangements such margins are widening The definition of children's human rights as understood in this analysis is taken directly from the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child CRC Here emphasis is placed on ways in which the CRC could be used to serve more effectively the needs of the most vulnerable populations of school age children in the US and elsewhere Public schools could be the very place where children come to understand they have rights Unfortunately many children do not get this information Instead the protections stated in the CRC and the realities of the lives of so many children are often worlds apart This volume sets out to be a part of changing this

Exploring Children's Rights Rolf Gollob, Peter Krapf, 2007-01-01 Children should know what rights they have but they should also learn how to appreciate and to use them To achieve this schools must allow for a wide range of learning experiences in children's rights education Children understand and appreciate their rights by using them both in school and in everyday life To encourage children to do so the challenge for the teacher is to create a setting that is governed by the spirit of democracy and human rights This manual has been designed for teachers who are looking for tools to teach children's rights to students at primary schools The features of this manual include nine small projects of four lessons each for students in their first nine years of school detailed lesson instructions that can be followed by beginners or used in teacher training a lesson plan including the key questions and key tasks in each at the beginning of each project description an approach of task based learning focusing on problem solving and learning by example which supports the pupils in conceptual learning skills training and the development of values and attitudes

Religious Schools v. Children's Rights James G. Dwyer, 2018-08-06 Despair over the reported inadequacies of public education leads many people to consider religious schools as an alternative James G Dwyer demonstrates however that religious schooling is almost completely unregulated and that common pedagogical practices in fundamentalist Christian and Catholic schools may be damaging to children He presents evidence of excessive restriction of children's basic liberties stifling of intellectual development the instilling of dogmatic and intolerant attitudes as well as the infliction of psychological and emotional harms including excessive guilt and repression and especially among girls diminished self esteem Courts legal and political theorists and the public typically argue that families and religious communities are entitled to raise their children as they see fit and that the state must remain neutral on religious matters Dwyer proposes an alternative framework for state policy regarding religious schooling and other child rearing practices urging that the focus always be on what is best from a secular perspective for the affected children He argues that the children who attend religious schools have a right to adequate state regulation and oversight of their education States are obligated to ensure that such schools do not engage in harmful practices and that they provide their students with the training necessary for pursuit of a broad range of careers and for full citizenship in a pluralistic democratic society

Children's Rights Education in Diverse Classrooms Lee Jerome, Hugh Starkey, 2021-04-08 With PISA tables accountability and performance management pulling educators in one direction and the understanding that education is a social process embedded in cultural contexts tailored to meet the needs and challenges of individuals and communities in another it is easy to end up in seeing teachers as positioned as opponents to the system Jerome and Starkey argue that the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child UNCRC 1989 can provide a pragmatic starting point for educators to challenge some of these unsettling trends in a way which does not set up unnecessary opposition with policy makers They review the evidence from international evaluations surveys and case studies about practice in human rights and child rights education before exploring the key principles of transformative and experiential education to offer a robust theoretical framework that can guide the development of child rights education They also draw out practical implications and

Wittmann, As stipulated in the 1989 UN Convention on the Rights of the Child protecting children from violence requires an approach looking beyond physical force in order to address all forms of violence or abuse including sexual abuse Through its reporting mechanism the 1989 CRC generates an unknown level of transparency and accountability in international relations Accordingly the role of the Holy See as a State party to the Convention has been traced over decades of early enthusiasm for implementing children's rights faithfully to aggressively rebuking the CRC Committee's authority eventually

Education in the Best Interests of the Child R. Brian Howe, Katherine Covell, 2013-02-07 A large body of research in disciplines from sociology and policy studies to neuroscience and educational psychology has confirmed that socioeconomic status remains the most powerful influence on children's educational outcomes. Socially disadvantaged children around the world disproportionately suffer from lower levels of educational achievement which in turn leads to unfavourable long term outcomes in employment and health. Education in the Best Interests of the Child addresses this persistent problem which violates not only the principle of equal educational opportunity but also the broader principle of the best interests of the child as called for in the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child. Building on the children's rights work accomplished in their previous book Empowering Children, Brian Howe and Katherine Covell identify three types of reform that can significantly close the educational achievement gap. Their findings make an important argument for stronger and more comprehensive action to equalize educational opportunities for disadvantaged children.

Fortin's Children's Rights and the Developing Law Rachel E. Taylor, 2024-02-29 The notion that children constitute an important group of rights holders has gained increasing acceptance both domestically and internationally. Nevertheless, this rhetorical commitment to children's rights is not necessarily realised in practice. Now in its fourth edition, Fortin's Children's Rights and the Developing Law explores the extent to which law and policy in England promotes or undermines the rights of children. Fully revised and updated, this textbook uses current research on child development and welfare to reflect on the extent to which the law fulfils children's rights in a wide range of areas including medical law, education and child poverty. These developments are measured against the domestic law and the UK's international obligations under, for example, the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.

Child Rights and International Discrimination Law Marit Skivenes, Karl Søvig, 2019-02-22 Societies and states are at a crossroad in how children are treated and how their rights are respected and protected. Children's new position and their strong rights create tensions and challenge the traditional relationships between family and the state. The United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child was adopted unanimously by the General Assembly of the United Nations in 1989 and came into force in 1990. Article 2 places states under an obligation to accord primacy to the best interests of the child in all actions concerning children and to ensure and regulate child protection. This book offers a comparative and critical analysis of the implementation of Article 2 of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child. In order to examine how Article 2 is being implemented, it is essential to have a sound understanding of the obligations it imposes. The opening chapters will explore the precise content of these obligations in terms of the legislative history of the text, its underlying philosophy, its amplification by the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child and subsequent authoritative interpretations of it by courts around the world. The book will then drill down into the conceptual and theoretical challenges posed by the very nature of the obligations and will offer in depth exploration of the long running rights v welfare debate that has always presented something of a challenge in giving effect to children's rights. Contributors are leading academics in the children's rights field drawn from a wide range of countries and jurisdictions worldwide, including those with common law, civilian and mixed traditions. Disciplines represented in the book include law, psychology, political science childhood studies social work and anthropology By drawing together the various facets of Article 2 and analysing it from a range of perspectives the volume provides a coherent and comprehensive inter disciplinary analysis on discrimination and the rights of the child Routledge International Handbook of Children's Rights Studies Wouter Vandenhoe, Ellen Desmet, Didier Reynaert, Sara Lembrechts, 2015-03-24 Since the adoption of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child 1989 children s rights have assumed a central position in a wide variety of disciplines and policies This handbook offers an engaging overview of the contemporary research landscape for those people in the theory and practice of children s rights The volume offers a multidisciplinary approach to children s rights as well as key thematic issues in children s rights at the intersection of global and local concerns The main approaches and topics within the volume are Law social work and the sociology of childhood and anthropology Geography childhood studies gender studies and citizenship studies Participation education and health Juvenile justice and alternative care Violence against children and female genital mutilation Child labour working children and child poverty Migration indigenous children and resource exploitation The specially commissioned chapters have been written by renowned scholars and researchers and come together to provide a critical and invaluable guide to the challenges and dilemmas currently facing children s rights
