

THE PALEOCENE-LOWER EOCENE BLACK MINGO GROUP OF THE EAST CENTRAL COASTAL PLAIN OF SOUTH CAROLINA

Abstract

Post-Maastrichtian, pre-Lotetian deposits of the South Carolina Coastal Plain at the surface and in the subsurface are examined and formally assigned to group, formation and member status. Previous terminology established by Sloan (1908) is retained as practical and new terminology is introduced as necessary. The Black Mingo Group is erected to include all the strata observed to occur between the unconformity at the boundary of the Maastrichtian and Danian stages at the base of the Tertiary section, and the unconformity between Ypresian and Lotetian stages which lies above. The Black Mingo is bounded below by the Lumber Group of Seifert et al. (1969) and above by the Orangeburg Group of Siple et al. (1975). Two major regional unconformities occur within the Black Mingo Group. The lower lies between strata assigned to the Danian and Thanetian stages. The upper lies between strata assigned to the Thanetian and Ypresian stages. The Rhems Formation is elevated from Sloan's Rhems Shale and a composite stratotype of the Rhems is established. The Rhems consists of two members, the Browns Ferry and the Perkins Bluff; both are Danian in age. The Rhems unconformably overlies Maastrichtian strata of the Pee Dee Formation, and underlies Thanetian strata of the Williamsburg Formation. The Williamsburg Formation is elevated from Sloan's Williamsburg "Pseudo Buhr" and lies unconformably above the Rhems Formation and below strata of early Eocene age. The Williamsburg Formation is assigned a composite stratotype, and two members, the Lower Bridge and the Chicora, are erected. Unnamed strata of Ypresian age are recognized above the Williamsburg Formation. They are considered in a separate study by others and await formal designation at this time. These are included in the Black Mingo Group on the basis of somewhat similar lithology, and similar tectonic development that is different than that occurring in the overlying Orangeburg Group. The Black Mingo Group, therefore, consists of three lithostratigraphic formational units in the eastern parts of Central South Carolina: the Rhems, the Williamsburg and the unnamed Ypresian unit. Within the Rhems and the Williamsburg the Perkins Bluff and the Chicora members designate somewhat coarser-grained shallower, clastic shelf sedimentation; the Browns Ferry and the Lower Bridge more finely clastic shelf sedimentation. Biostratigraphic zonation, principally based on ostracodes is outlined within the lithostratigraphic framework. Important fossils, including pollen, ostracodes, foraminifers, pelecypods and gastropods are discussed where pertinent.

Introduction

Paleontologic and stratigraphic evidence is presented to support the revision of the Lower Paleogene deposits of the South Carolina Coastal Plain most commonly referred to as the Black Mingo Formation. The Black Mingo Formation of Sloan (1908) and the informally erected Williamsburg and Rhems members of Van Nieuwenhuise (1978) are herein discussed and redefined. The Black Mingo Formation is raised to group status and the Williamsburg and Rhems members are elevated to formational status. The Williamsburg Formation is divided into the Chicora and Lower Bridge members and the Rhems Formation is divided into the Perkins Bluff and the Browns Ferry members. The present study addresses itself to the outcropping units of the Black Mingo Group in and around the type localities of the Black Mingo "Phase," the Rhems "Phase" and the Williamsburg "Pseudo-Buhr" of Sloan (1908). This includes most of Williamsburg and Georgetown counties and portions of Clarendon, Berkeley, and Dorchester counties (Figure 1). To the west of the study area, additional lithologic units outcrop that are correlative to the Black Mingo Group. These units need further study, but data suggest that they could be assigned as additional members to the Williamsburg and Rhems formations. They are not discussed in this report.

Sources of data include lithologic and paleontologic evidence from water wells, test wells, undisplaced power-auger holes and outcrops (Tables 1 and 2). Electric logs, including spontaneous potential (SP) and short normal resistivity curves (R_{sn}), were obtained for all water wells and the U.S. Geological Survey's Clubhouse Crossroads Corehole 1. The electric logs were primarily used for correlation of the units into the subsurface and were integrated with data from cuttings, outcrops, cores, and power-auger samples. Additionally, gamma-logs were obtained for a number of the drill holes and were used to assist in the regional correlations.
